Soviet Veto Keeps Italy And Finland Out of U. N.

Balkan Satellites Must Be Admitted Or He Will Bar Others, Gromyko Say

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

Lake Success, N. Y., Oct. 1.—Russia tonight vetoed admittance of Italy and Finland to the United Nations because she could not also get her three Balkan satellites accepted by the Security Council.

It was the second Soviet veto of Italian membership. Andrei Gromyko gave advance warning that the Russians would "never" permit admittance of Italy or Finland unless the Security Council also accepted Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania.

Only Poland supported the Soviet votes against Italy and Finland. The United States and the eight other members of the Council voted acceptance.

Today's pair brought to 22 the total of Russia's vetoes, 10 of them directed against permitting 6 nations to become members.

New Effort Seen

Immediately after the final vote, Warren R. Austin, American representative on the Council, said he would support at this Assembly new attempts to get membership for Italy, Austria, Kire, Portugal and Transjordan, all barred by Russian vetoes.

His statement was written for a broadcast long before the voting and made no mention of Finland. It had been generally expected that Finland would be accepted by all members. Austin said later he had intended to include Finland.

Gromyko protested that Russia had been prevented from supporting the applications of Italy and Finland because of an "unsavory political game."

The United States abstained from voting against the three Balkan countries rather than have its vote considered a veto. However, in each of the votes, enough other members abstained from voting to prevent a majority acceptance.

Although the State Department announced immediately before the Council met that diplomatic Bulgarian Relations Resumed by U. S.

The United States has resumed diplomatic relations with Soviet-dominated Bulgaria, Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett announced yesterday.

He made it clear that recognition of the former Axis satellite "does not reflect either approval or condonation of certain recent actions of the Bulgarian government."

Among recent acts of the Bulgarian government which have drawn United States fire was the hanging September 23 of Nikola Petkov, anti-Red leader of the Agrarian Party. Both the U. S. and Great Britain made repeated efforts to prevent Petkov's execution and the State Department here denounced his trial and conviction as a "travesty on justice."

At the time diplomatic officials pointed out that the United States and Britain could make their disapproval apparent by resisting Bulgaria's admission to the United Nations.

Lovett said President Truman had appointed Donald R. Heath, a career diplomat, to be Minister to Bulgaria. Until Heath reports at Sofia "in the very near future," John Evarts Homer will continue as acting United States political representative there.

In announcing the step to a news conference, Love said it was taken because of "the intention of the United States to maintain its interest in the welfare of the Bulgarian people, to keep itself informed concerning developments in Bulgaria, and to continue its efforts to protect American interests in that country." He pointed out that a peace treaty ending the state of war with Bulgaria went into force September 16.

Air Force's Command Setup Streamlined by Symington

Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg | Lieut. Gen. Lauris Norstad | Maj. Gen. Howard A. Craig

Maj. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards | Lieut. Gen. Edwin W. Rawlings | Gen. Joseph T. McNarney

Among officers who figure in Air Force reorganization

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington yesterday announced a sweeping reorganization of the new fighting arm's command setup in which the bulk of its top leaders were shifted or promoted.

In place of the old air staff, the Air Force revamped its top headquarters here into what Symington called an "operational organization more comparable to modern business administration" than the old-style military general staff.

One new four-star general and seven new lieutenant generals were created in the move to fill out the high command of the new independent force.

Key Appointments

Lieut. Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg was appointed Vice Chief of Staff under General Carl Spaatz, Air Chief of Staff, and advanced to full general.

Four major staff heads were established under Vandenberg and the officials named to fill them all were promoted to lieutenant generals. They are:

Maj. Gen. Lauris Norstad, 40-year-old director of plans and operations for the Army General Staff, to be USAF Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations. His reassignment will be delayed until the Army names a successor.

Maj. Gen. Howard A. Craig, now commanding the Alaskan theater, to be Deputy Chief of Staff for Materiel.

Maj. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, until recently commander of the United States Air Forces in Europe, to be Deputy Chief of Staff for Personnel and Administration.

Rawlings Gains Star

Maj. Gen. Edwin W. Rawlings, who was Air Comptroller under the old Army Air Forces, takes over a job of expanded importance with the same title and gains an extra star.

Other new assignments and promotions include:

General Joseph T. McNarney, senior Air Force member of the military staff of the United Nations, to head the Air Materiel Command at Wright Field, Ohio.

Lieut. Gen. Nathan F. Twining, whom McNarney will replace at Wright Field, to succeed General Craig in command of the Alaskan Theater. Symington said that Twining's assignment indicates the importance with which the Air Force views that area and difficulties of air operations in the Far North.

LeMay is Promoted

Maj. Gen. Curtis E. LeMay, formerly AAF deputy chief of staff for research and development, to command the United States Air Forces in Europe. He will be promoted to lieutenant general.

Maj. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, now heading the Caribbean Air Command, to succeed General McNarney on the U. N. staff.

Reds Hit U. S. For Lack of 'Cooperation'

Indignant at Blocking Of Ukraine's Election To Security Council

By Ferdinand Kuhn, Jr.
Post Reporter

Flushing, N. Y., Oct. 1.—For the second successive day the United States and a minority of the 55-nation Assembly persisted today in blocking the election of the Ukraine to one of the nonpermanent seats on the Security Council.

Two more roll-call ballots failed to give either the Ukraine, backed by Russia, or India, backed by the United States, the required two-thirds vote. On the last of these votes the Ukraine had 32 and India 24, with 36 needed for election.

Bloc voting also paralyzed the Assembly in its efforts to fill two new vacancies on the trusteeship council, until President Oswaldo Aranha, finally postponed further balloting until next week.

The Soviet delegation promptly issued a statement accusing the United States, Britain and "certain delegations" of other countries of striking "a blow to international cooperation" in blocking the Ukraine.

Russians 'Indignant'

It said such a course "cannot but cause justified indignation among those who are striving for the strengthening of cooperation in the United Nations." It argued that "the Slav states have an indisputable right" to choose their own candidate for the Security Council and to have their choice approved by the whole Assembly.

It spoke of the "lawful interests and the indisputable right" of the Slav states to have one of the non-

The New York Yankees smacked out 15 hits and a 10-3 victory over the Brooklyn Dodgers in the second game of the World Series yesterday before 69,865 fans at the Yankee Stadium, New York. Tribute Paid to 'Democrat'

3 Congressmen Lay Wreath On Unmarked Grave of Petkov

Istanbul, Turkey, Oct. 1 (AP).—Three American Congressmen, paying tribute to "one of the greatest Democrats of all time," laid a huge wreath today on the unmarked grave in Sofia of Nikola Petkov, executed nine days ago by the Communist-led Bulgarian government, it was disclosed.

The wreath was loaded in a jeep, and taken discretely to the cemetery by the three men while they were en route to the airport to take off for Istanbul. Bulgarian officials apparently had no knowledge of the act.

An informant identified the three Congressmen as Senator Carl Hatch (D., N. Mex.); Representative John Davis Lodge (R., Conn.), and Representative Walter H. Judd (R., Minn.). They are members of an 11-man congressional committee which arrived here from Sofia.

One member of the delegation said it was an "unofficial" act and should not be interpreted otherwise.

How the grave was located was not entirely clear. One source said members of the delegation talked with Petkov's sister. Others said it was determined by "an American."

Petkov's grave was described as "a heap of raw earth in a miserable part of the cemetery," and unmarked.

One source said there was some discussion that the act might instigate violence, but one Congressman was reported to have declared "we are as dispensable as anyone else."

Police Act To Cut Crime At Night

Captain to Watch Law Enforcement In Early Morning Hours Over the City

Maj. Robert J. Barrett, superintendent of police, took steps yesterday to reduce the night-time crime rate in Washington. He ordered:

Patrolmen on beats after dark to stay on the alert or else get off the force.

A police captain to cruise the city during the early morning hours to keep watch over law enforcement.

Additional men be assigned to the robbery squad.

Barrett's orders were prompted by several factors: FBI statistics showing that crime is on the increase here in several categories, and two incidents of policemen sleeping in automobiles when they were supposed to be patrolling a beat.

"Hoodlers" Warned

He also issued a warning to what he termed a "few hoodlers" (the police equivalent of goldbrickers) that they "must either do an honest eight hours of duty every day or else get out."

He then authorized that police precinct captains be alternated monthly as night supervisors of the force. Starting last night and to continue through the month of October, the supervisor is Capt. Clarence H. Lutz of the Tenth Precinct.

Major Barrett described Captain Lutz as the "toughest officer on the force."

To fight the increase in petty crimes here, Lieut. Thomas Sullivan was ordered to supervise the work of all precinct detectives.

Used Successfully

Major Barrett said that at the Duluth conference of police chiefs he learned that other cities had adopted this supervisory system and that it had worked successfully.

Major Barrett said that despite criticism of the Police Department by newspapers here, including The Washington Post, that morale of the individual policeman was very high.

"The public," he said, "is confident that the Police Department is doing a good job from all indications I get. I have received numerous letters commending our work, and citizens have thanked the department for the fine job it is doing."

U. S. Raises Grain Export Goal To 570 Million Bushels in Year; Self-Rationing Program Asked

'The Saving Asked . . . Is . . . Very Small . . .'

PRESIDENT'S APPEAL—President Harry Truman, displaying strong feeling as he clasps his notes, addresses members of his newly organized Citizens' Food Committee at the White House yesterday. He said that "one bushel of grain saved by every American in the next few months will do the job of helping hungry nations." "The saving asked of each individual," the President said, "is actually very small." Committee Chairman Charles Luckman (right), listens

Citizens Committee Figure Is 20 Pct. Above That Set by Cabinet Advisors

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

President Truman and his citizens food committee set 570 million bushels of grain—even more than was exported last year—as the goal for shipment to food-deficit nations this year.

The target determined upon is the one recommended last Saturday by the Harriman food resources committee headed by Chester C. Davis, president of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank. It is 100 million bushels greater than the amount fixed by the Cabinet food committee, and urged by Agriculture Secretary Anderson, as the limit attainable.

In order to attain the enormous goal, Chairman Charles Luckman of the citizens food committee, urged "every individual, every organization, every housewife and every eating establishment to cooperate in a voluntary self-rationing program."

Ways of Saving Suggested

This program was listed as:

1. Buy the cheaper cuts. "More sorely needed wheat is used to fatten cattle for the choice cuts; you pay higher and higher prices."
2. Don't overcook meats. "Roasts, chops, almost all meat shrinks when you cook it too much."
3. Don't serve too much. "Serve your family plates in the kitchen. Pile on a little less; don't urge seconds."
4. Use leftovers. "Home made hash, stews, soups, stuffed tomatoes. Save meat. Save money."
5. Save wheat other ways. "Poultry and eggs, butter and cheese, depend on feeding grains. Use them wisely and sparingly, so that we can save wheat to fight hunger over there."

Truman to Broadcast

The food conservation program, Luckman announced, would be launched Sunday night when President Truman, Secretary of State Marshall and Luckman will join in a half hour, four-network radio program from 10:30 to 11.

The broadcast over American, National, Mutual and Columbia networks, will open an all-media (all types of advertising) program to acquaint the Nation with the crisis of starvation in Europe and Asia.

Luckman emphasized that the program did not contemplate any "eat less" theme. It calls insted, for the Nation to "waste less," and to replace foods that require grains with other foods not in short supply.

In his statement Mr. Truman indicated confidence that public cooperation would put his voluntary food-saving program across. But his words carried the warning that compulsory measures might be taken if the drive fails—measures such as rationing, price controls, etc.

Nourse Echoes Warning

Dr. Edwin G. Nourse, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, who called at the White House to deliver his quarterly report, declared to newsmen:

"If the situation becomes sufficiently acute, the return of rationing and price control would have to be considered. We hope the situation will not get that bad."

Secretary Anderson, who, with Secretary Harriman sat beside Luckman throughout a stormy news conference, declared afterward that he "had no quarrel" with the program calling for higher wheat export goals than he had recommended.

"Its up to this committee to save the extra 100 million bushels," he commented. "It can't come from any other source."

Luckman pointed to "roughs" of his proposed advertising program.

Food Adviser 'Roughed Up' In Interview

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Charles Luckman, who left the tranquillity of a $300,000-a-year job in Boston to help out in the food crisis, got caught in a battle of semantics yesterday and had a rough time of it.

He faced a hundred or so Washington reporters in the movie room of the White House.

"I'm at your mercy," he said, flashing a smile, "and I hope you'll be tender."

The reporters weren't tender. They were trying to get something concrete, something that could be squeezed into a headline, and Luckman wasn't talking in headlines.

Gets Going-Over

As a result he got what the craft calls a "going-over."

Questions were fired at him from all points of a semicircle, sometimes three or four at a time. At one point, a reporter accused Luckman of using "namby-pamby language," despite his promise to avoid such language.

Luckman, 38-year-old head of Lever Brothers Soap Co. and now chairman of the Citizens Food Committee, started out to explain the "Waste Less" campaign.

"Are you talking about eating less?" a reporter shouted.

Luckman, using a good many words, went on to emphasize that the campaign was aimed at food "conservation." He listed some of the things that might be done under such a program, such as buying wisely and buying only what will be used.

A Sharp One

He described the "over-all plan of dealing with "every segment" of the American economy — consumers, farmers, distributors and processors.

Export Goal Causes Jump In Food Prices

Adverse Weather Reports Add to Gravity of Outlook

Prices of grains, livestock and most other food commodities again leaped upwards yesterday, as word drifted from Washington that the Government had finally decided on a 500-million-bushel export goal for wheat.

Adding a still more serious note to the food outlook, however, was a warning from the weather bureau that continued dry weather in the great southwestern winter wheat area was threatening next year's bread grains.

To these reports came word of snow and sleet through Northern Iowa, a full week ahead of the average killing frost date in that area.

Wheat Moving Upward

Withcorn at a new record price, wheat was also moving upwards toward an all-time high. In Minneapolis December wheat hit $3; in Chicago December contracts nearing $3, with many predicting that goal today. Chicago December contracts reached $2.92½, the highest price for that month's contracts in nearly 100 years of the Chicago Board of Trade.

Generally wheat was from 5 to 8¼ cents higher; corn was up from 5½ and 5 ¾, and oats from 2 to 2¾ above Tuesday.

Also affecting the market was Government buying for export. The Commodity Corporation bought 2,505,000 bushels of wheat at Kansas City yesterday: 1,950,000 at Minneapolis, and 688,300 at Chicago.

For the third successive day the wholesale price of butter advanced. Grade AA closed at 79¼ cents a pound.

Sworn As Virginia U. Head

Darden at Inaugural Warns On Peril of National Distrust

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Charlottesville, Va., Oct. 1.—Colgate W. Darden, jr., who abandoned his brilliant political career to assume the role of educator, was sworn in today as third president of the University of Virginia.

Thomas Jefferson would have been pleased at the choice of Darden to head his beloved university. For it was Jefferson who swore "upon the altar of God eternal hostility against every form of tyranny over the mind of man."

And Darden, in his inaugural address, declared:

"If we hold firmly to our purpose and leave no stone unturned in giving our people a sound, general education, we shall in time equip the rank and file to appraise with reasonable accuracy the worth of those individuals and ideas that compete for their allegiance and support."

There was a minimum of pomp at the inaugural ceremony, held on the lower lawn near the university rotunda. Four thousand persons watched the colorful academic procession pass down the rotunda to the stage where the new president assumed office.

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., university rector, inducted Darden into office. The newly inaugurated president said he would bring to the service of the university "with gladness, whatever strength I have."

There was nothing of the "scholarly detachment" associated with universities in the addresses at Darden's inauguration. Overtones of the crisis which faces the world were in all the speeches—in Governor William M. Tuck's brief message:

"Our system of democratic principles has come face to face with totalitarian principles. We must call for thorough education and grounding of our people in the meaning of our way of life if we are to prevent 'tyranny over the mind of man'."

In the address of Sir Alfred Zimmern, emeritus professor of international relations at Oxford:

"At this anxious moment, when the whole fabric of civilization seems to be poised in the balances . . . universities . . . can form and foster true contacts between the peoples . . . Never was such communion between chosen spirits more needed than it is today; for it remains as true as it was in the days of Augustine that peace is, before all things, order in the soul."

And in Darden's inaugural address:

"Many . . . believe that Western society has lost purpose and lost drive and that unless this purpose and drive can be restored, the deterioration which has already become apparent will culminate in disintegration and collapse . . . There appears to be no longer a

Men Told To Work Anyway

Baltimore Printer Parleys Over Contract Break Down

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—Wage negotiations between Local 12, International Typographical Union, and Baltimore print shops broke down last night, and union men were told by their officers to report to work today without a contract.

The old contract between the local and the print shops, the Graphic Arts League, expired last midnight.

The local, which was charged several weeks ago in a League several weeks ago in a league Relations Board with violating the Taft-Hartley Act by failing to bargain collectively, offered last week to sign a contract.

The local said its offer was made with the approval of the international's executive board.

Negotiators met two days ago on "working conditions" clauses of the union proposal, but issued no formal statements.

Yesterday the local's officers and scale committee met with league officials to discuss wage proposals.

Early today, Charles V. Brannock, local 12 president, and F. E. Street, executive secretary of the Graphic Arts League, announced the wage talks had failed.

Brannock said the print shops wanted the local to sign a "partial contract" on "economic aspects alone."

"If we cannot sign a full contract, we cannot sign a partial one," he said. "The local union, with the approval of the ITU, stands ready at any time to sign a complete document."

Area Officials Back Waste Less Program

Several District Groups Declare Support But Call Proposals Not Strong Enough

Greater Washington Area county and city officials immediately voiced strong support last night for the food saving program prepared by President Truman's Citizens Food Committee.

Several District organizations, while supporting the voluntary drive, declared that it did not go far enough and should be followed by a return to rationing and price control of scarce foods.

Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Commissioner, said the recommended program was "fine and a splendid effort." He hoped the "residents of our town will get right behind the President's program and support it to the utmost."

Steps to Be Discussed

The commissioner said implementation of the program will probably be discussed by the Board of Commissioners at a meeting today. The commissioners last month recommended the institution of two volutary, meatless days a week by District residents.

Brooks Johns, president of the Montgomery County Board of Commissioner, said he "thor- Commissioners, said he thoroughly" agreed with the program and said the commissioners will probably call on county residents to support it at the board's meeting tomorrow.

William Carson, chairman of the Prince Georges County Board of Commissioners, said the recommended program has been followed in his home for several weeks. He said he "heartily" indorsed the recommendations and would bring them before the commissioners' meeting Tuesday.

City Manager Joseph M. Pancoast of Alexandria declared he was "right behind the program" and expected that Alexandrians would do likewise. He said the City Council may act to promote the campaign at the next meeting, October 14.

Basil M. DeLashmutt, chairman of the Arlington County board of supervisors, said the indorsed the program and would present it to board members at a meeting October 11.

One of the first national groups to come out in favor of the national program was the American Veterans Committee. Chat Paterson, national chairman of the World War II group, pledged full support and said AVC chapters will be urged to help set up "community food saving drives to reinforce the national effort."

Marshall Plan Will Fail Unless Congress Aids France, Itlay Soon, Truman Warns

President Truman yesterday formally warned the chairmen of four key congressional committee that the Marshall program for European rehabilitation will fail unless Congress acts promptly on stop-gap aid to keep France and Italy from starving after December 1.

Mr. Truman's warning was contained in identical letters sent to heads of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and the appropriations committees

Following is the text of the letter

"The situation in western Europe has, in the last few months, become critical. This is especially true in the cases of France and Italy, where slow recovery of productivity, particularly of goods for export, combined with the increasnig drain of their dollar resources, has produced acute distress.

"The unusually bad harvests in western Europe, together with rising costs of imports, the unfortunate results of the temporary cessation of sterling convertibility and the near exhaustion of gold and dollar reserves, have placed these two countries in a position where they are without adequate food and fuel supplies for the fall and winter, and without sufficient dollars with which to purchase these essentials. They cannot, by their own efforts, meet this major crisis which is already upon them.

"Political groups that hope to profit by unrest and distress are now attempting to capitalize on the grave fears of the French and Italian people that they will not have enough food and fuel to survive the coming winter.

"The prospect of a successful general economic recovery program for Europe is one of the major hopes for peace and economic security in the world. The Congress will soon be called upon to consider the part which the United States should play in aiding this program. But the program will have no chance of success if economic collapse occurs in Europe before the program can be put into operation. Prompt and effective aid to meet the urgent needs of the present is essential, lest the strains become too great and result in an expanding economic depression which would engulf western Europe and, eventually, spread over much of the rest of the world.

"I have examined with great care the means now available to the executive branch of the government to provide the necessary assistance. They may meet the urgent needs of the next few weeks, but it is clear that they cannot provide the necessary assistance beyond December, if as long as that. Requirements beyond that time can best be met only if further authority is granted by the Congress.

"The problems arising out of these circumstances are of such importance that they should be considered by the Congress at the earliest practicable time. The early convening of your committee, together with other appropriate congressional committees, is a necessary first step in this consideration.

"I am requesting, therefore, that you call your committee together at the earliest possible date to consider these problems. I appreciate the fact that some of the members of your committee are investigating, or planning to investigate, conditions in Europe at first hand. Time is of critical importance in this matter, however, and I earnestly hope that arrangements can be made for convening your committee at an early date.

"The appropriate departments and agencies of the executive branch of the Government are prepared to provide information and make recommendations to your committee when its meetings begin."

Truman Talk to Food Group

The texts of President Truman's remarks to the initial session of the Citizens' Food Committee at the White House yesterday and the reply of Charles Luckman, the committee chairman follow:

Mr. Truman said:

THIS group of distinguished citizens has met to consider the grave food problem facing the world today. You are here because millions of people in many countries are hungry and look to the United States for help. You are here because the United States, in addition to being a granary of bread is even more a granary of hope.

I have asked you to serve on the Citizens' Food Committee, with Mr. Luckman as chairman, because I believe strongly that making our food serve the best possible use in these critical times is a matter for action not by the Government alone but by all the people of the United States.

Each of you possesses a special talent and long experience in some phase of this problem. I know that you have accepted membership on the committee in the full knowledge that you will be called upon to devote to the situation we face a generous amount of work and much conscientious thinking, as well as a deep concern for the common welfare.

As is well known, this year's harvest has been very poor in many parts of the world. All through western Europe, cold and floods and drought have sharply reduced grain production. The result is that in the coming months these countries will have to cut their rations below the danger point unless they get more help, in the form of larger grain shipments, from the United States and other exporting countries.

IT IS extremely important to the United States that any serious reduction in the rations of hungry people be prevented. Apart from humanitarian considerations, if rations are significantly cut this winter, economic rehabilitation will come to a stop. This, in turn, would increase the degree and duration of dependence by other nations on special assistance from the United States. Most important, if we turn our backs upon these people they will turn from hunger to despair and from despair to chaos in areas where stability is essential to the peace and economic security of the world.

In the face of this situation, the amount of grain which the United States can export is limited. All estimates indicate that about 470 million bushels of grain are the most we can plan to export under present conditions. At the same time, there is strong evidence that we will have to export at least 100 million bushels more than this if we are to do our share in meeting the absolute minimum needs of distressed people in other countries.

This 100 million bushels must be saved by the American people. This is our minimum goal. We know that only part of that saving can come from serving fewer slices of bread. The greater part of the saving must come out of what we feed our livestock. We must also save out of what we waste, and out of what we use in a score of ways for human food.

This saving must be achieved, not by increasing prices so that the brunt of the sacrifice will be borne by those least able to buy food, but through an equitable sharing by all of our citizens. There will be more than enough food in the United States to go around, provided it is fairly distributed.

Excessive prices, however, result in unfair distribution.

Already, increasing prices are bringing hardship to millions of Americans of low or moderate income. Failure to check price increases promptly will not only lower the American living standard, but could impair the confidence of business, and thus jeopardize the splendid record we have achieved in the maintenance of high employment, high production and general prosperity.

We must get prices down and help hungry people in other countries at the same time.

IT has been estimated that we waste about 10 per cent of all the food we buy. Clearly, by wasting less, American families can help significantly in feeding hungry families abroad. In addition to cutting down waste, Americans can save by being more selective in the foods they buy.

In our free enterprise system, we place major reliance on the voluntary actions of businessmen, farmers, workers and consumers. It is in accordance with this principle that I have consistently set forth a program for voluntary action in all parts of the economy.

The appointment of the Citizens' Food Committee is a further step in this direction. The conservation practices which this committee works out, by reducing the demand for certain foods, should bring down some food prices, and hence reduce the cost of living.

As representatives of all segments of our population, the Citizens' Food Committee can help us plan where, how much, and what kinds of food we should save. It can enlist the aid of those who should support the program—consumers, retailers, food distributors and processors, and farmers. It can also develop the best ways of informing the public on what steps Americans, as individuals and groups, can take.

We must deal with the problem quickly and decisively. Much depends, therefore, upon the voluntary conservation measures which the Citizens' Food Committee will propose. Much depends upon the speed and thoroughness with which the American people will put these voluntary measures into effect.

The saving asked of each individual is actually very small. One bushel of grain saved by every American in the next few months will do the job.

Luckman replied:

SINCE the formation of this committee last Thursday thousands of letters have come to us from people in every walk of life, and almost to a man these letters say "What can I do to help?"

We believe with all our hearts in these American people and in what I think we should acknowledge to be their God-given ability to lick any problem, once the facts have been placed before them fairly and squarely.

As you have just said, there are millions of people in Europe, desperate people struggling against hunger. They are struggling for life. It seems to me only common sense to acknowledge that we cannot have chaos in the rest of the world and prosperity here any more than we could have war on one side of the ocean and peace on the other.

This war on hunger is every man's war. I say that because hunger comes to all people regardless of race, religion, color, creed or political differences of opinion.

In the same way, this committee which you have appointed, the Citizens' Food Committee, is every man's committee. We cannot fail in this mission which you have given us without failing in our duty to America. And, Mr. President, the pepole of America have never failed in the accomplishment of any war. They will not fail in this war on hunger. On their behalf we pledge you our most earnest endeavors.

Grain Export Goal Raised

These picture it based around an overflowing grabage can, with the slogan "Don't start World War III here."

The committee was started on its job yesterday by President Truman. The Executive called for Americans to serve "fewer slices of bread" and announced the goal of saving 100 million bushels of wheat.

To questioners Luckman dodged committing the committee on (1) meatless or wheatless days, (2) smaller bread loaves.

He indicated that if a decision is reached on these questions in time, they will be presented Sunday night.

"Our figures show," Luckman declared, "that we can meet the immediate winter grain needs of Europe only if every American will cooperate with this program.

"As this specific program develops, we will investigate every possible additional source of food conservation for both the present and the future."

Distillers' Aid Sought

Luckman added that conversations are being arranged with distillers to discuss cutting down on their use of grain.

He added that meetings have already been held with restaurant operators. Other industrial users of grain are to be approached.

He listed as the groups with whom his committee plans to work the consumers, the farmers, the processors and the distributors. The precise nature of his program with these was undisclosed.

"We have already received heartening offers of cooperation from both industrial and consumer groups," he said.

"The arsenal of democracy must now become the granary of the world, or we shall bury our hopes for peace with those who died to preserve it."

The problem, he declared, was to "export more grain." That, he said, means we must "conserve more grain."

"This in turn means that we must use less grain, particularly in those places where consumption is greatest.

"While large quantities of grain go into bread, by far the greatest amount of grain is consumed not by people, but by animals.

"Historical records indicate that 1 pound of pork less means 5½ pounds of grain more; 1 pound of beef less, means 2½ pounds of grain more; 1 pound of mutton less means 1½ pounds of grain more.

"One pound of turkey or chicken less means almost 5 pounds of grain more," he added, "and whenever we are able to save a dozen eggs, we save almost half a pound of grain.

"Therefore, if we are going to reduce our consumption of grains, we must also reduce our consumption of meat, or poultry and of eggs."

The inter-Cabinet row emphasized in the reports of the Harriman Food Resources Committee and the Anderson Cabinet Food Committee and which was resolved in favor of the former yesterday, was explained in a six-page release by Harriman last night.

Little War Danger Seen by Red Leader

Market Basket

Pork Offers Best Buys For Weekend

By Lucia Brown
Post Reporter

Pork promises to be the best buy among the fresh meats during the coming weekend.

A preliminary survey indicates that some retail grocers plan specials as low as 50 to 55 cents a pound on fresh pork shoulders and 59 cents a pound for fresh hams.

Scrapple, at around 27 cents a pound, will be the thriftiest breakfast meat. Pork pudding, a similar product suitable for serving at lunch or dinner, will be available to canny consumers at 32 cents a pound.

New crop prunes and raisins will be found in a number of stores at prices slightly lower than those charged for last year's crop. Prunes will be an especially economical buy for use either as a breakfast food or in making salads and desserts.

Carrots will be scarce and high on the weekend market, and tomato prices will increase because of recent frosts. Both string and lima beans will be plentiful and reasonable, as well as greens, peppers, celery and cabbage.

Few grapefruit will be on sale here, dealers say, because the first of the Florida crop is by-passing Washington for New York. Those available will be Puerto Rican ggrapefruit and high-priced. Bananas will be scarce. The supply is even shorter now than at this season during the war years, wholesalers say. Canteloupes and honeydew melons will be relatively plentiful, with a few Casabas and Christmas melons appearing.

Little change in retail butter and egg prices over the weekend is anticipated by local merchants, although the wholesale price on butter has advanced slightly in the last three days.

Foreign Agents Try To Enter Russia, Military Head Says

Moscow, Oct. 1 (AP).—The president of the Soviet supreme military tribunal declared today little danger exists now of a new war, but that foreign countries were attempting to send agents into Russia disguised as "scientific, industrial and commercial leaders and correspondents."

Vasily V. Ulrich, writing in "Party Life," is regarded as an authority on the recent security decrees. He said foreign countries had in the past sent spies to Russia.

Romania Closes Border To All but 'Officials'

Prague, Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Only specially-authorized "official" visitors may enter Romania under a tight border-control program reported today in dispatches from Bucharest, Romanian capital, and Budapest, capital of Hungary. No concrete reasons were given.

Russia Asked To Explain

Russian military governor of Germany, Marshal Vassily Sokolovsky, to explain whether the speech was delivered with the knowledge and approval of the Soviet military government and whether it represented Soviet policy in Germany.

Clay said he took strong exception to Tulpanov's allegations that American monopoly capitalists were seeking to gain control of Germany an dthat "American criminal elements" were negotiating a deal.

Sokolovsky replied, Clay said, that he was not acquainted with Tulpanov's speech and that he would investigate the matter.

A similar attack against President Truman in the Russian Literary Gazette was protested in Moscow earlier this week by U. S. Ambassador Walter B. Smith.

Food Prices Rise Again

reaching $3.35—within 65 cents of the all-time record of last October. Cattle generally were steady. Hogs were up as much as $1 a hundred.

(One hundred pounds of steer on the hoof equals 68 pounds of meat at wholesale, or 46.4 pounds "over the butcher's counter." Thus $35 a hundredweight for a steer is equal to $35 for 46.4 pounds of beef.)

As prices rolled steadily upward, former Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., called upon President Truman to stop "shado wboxing" with the price situation and ask legislation to roll back prices at least to what they were last January 1.

France Behind Schedule In Returning POWs

American officials said yesterday that France has been able to send home only about 200,000 of the 630,000 German war prisoners whom she agreed to free by October 1 if possible. They blamed transport difficulties.

words," said Izzy Stone of PM. "Now, Mr. Luckman, will you tell us what they mean?"

Luckman went ahead patiently and, in the opinion of at least one reporter, gallantly. He explained that the committee was new, that many details still had to be worked out.

He said that Americans were not being asked to cut down on their total consumption, but only on specific items that would result in more grain for hungry Europe.

"Will that reduce prices?" he was asked.

"Well, that would take a crystal ball," he said.

He added, however, that conservation of food would naturally have "a beneficial effect on the cost of living."

"What do you mean by that?"

"The only beneficial effect I know of," Luckman replied, "would be a reduction in the cost of living."

Turning to his own soap company, which is the Nation's second largest, he recalled that some time ago that sales began to fall off. The only thing to do, he said, was to reduce prices.

"But people don't have to use soap," somebody muttered.

A woman reporter told Luckett that if he looked in her garbage pail, about the most nutritious thing he would find would be a melon rind.

Announces Broadcast

"Do you think housewives can waste food at these prices?" another woman reporter shouted.

Luckman brought the news conference to a close by announcing that the Citizens Food Committee would put on a half-hour broadcast Sunday night over four networks beginning at 10:30 o'clock. The orators will be President Truman, Secretary of State Marshall and Luckman himself.

"Did you enjoy the press conference?" Luckman was asked at the end.

His reply was a model of lucidity and concreteness.

"No," he said, wearily.

Dismantlings Involve Billion

Berlin, Oct. 1 (AP).—Gen. Lucius D. Clay said today factory dismantlings in the British-American zones would involve properties worth one billion dollars "less than what Germany receives in aid from the United States and Britain in one year of occupation."

The American Militray Governor indicated the dismantlings would complete reparations to be taken from western Germany. Asked whether the bizonal area would be expected to pay reparations from current manufactured production, he answered:

"No allowance has been made in the bizonal level of industry for reparations out of current production."

Of threats from German labor unions to strike against further factory removals, Clay said:

"If we say a plant is going to be dismantled it is going to be dismantled."

Soviet Refusal To Admit U. S. Group Studied

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

The State Department is looking into Russia's refusal to permit Assistant Secretary of State John E. Peurifoy and a Senate Committee to visit the United States Embassy in Moscow, Acting Secretary of State Robert A. Lovett said yesterday.

Lovett told a news conference he was familiar with the suggestions of some of the Senators that the United States retaliate by cutting down on the number of Russians admitted to the United States.

He added that the State Department would have no official comment to make at least until it had completed its study of the case.

Senator William F. Knowland (R., Calif.), one of the members of the Senate Appropriations Committee denied entry to Russia, yesterday formally requested President Truman to take steps to limit the number of Russians permitted here to the exact number of Americans admitted to Russia.

In his letter to the President, the California Senator said that on February 1 of this year there were 286 Americans in Russia, including the diplomatic corps and newspaper correspondents.

At the same time, he said, the State Department had issued visas for 1500 Russians to enter the United States.

Knowland asked that steps be taken "forthwith" to equalize the situation, a suggestion which would involve cancellation of the visas of approximately 1200 Russians now in the United States.

"Of necessity this must be a top level decision," Knowland acknowledged.

Two other members of the Appropriations Committee, Chairman Styles Bridges (R., N. H.) and C. Wayland Brooks (R., Ill.), had previously protested the Russian action.

Senator Henry C. Dworshak (R., Idaho), a member of the excluded committee, said he did not favor any retaliatory measure. This country should "impress on the Russian leaders the advantage of displaying a more logical viewpoint in dealing with this country," the Idaho Senator declared.

Lovett disclosed that four other Government officials were refused visas along with Assistant Secretary Peurifoy and the committee. These were State Department assistants to Peurifoy scheduled to make the trip with the committee members.

The full text of the letter from Soviet Deputy Minister for Foreign Affairs Malik refusing the visas was released by the State Department.

As previously stated by Bridges, the Soviet rejection was based on the fact that the committee was to make an "investigation."

In a closing paragraph, Malik said:

"At the same time the Ministry of Foreign Affairs is ready to issue visas for entry into the U. S. S. R. to other persons who are proceeding to the U. S. S. R. without the aim of making an investigation."

Four Are Indicted In Gun Smuggling

2 Maryland Men Charged in Plot To Arm Venezuelans

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 1 (AP).—A Federal grand jury indicted four men today in an aerial gun-running plot involving stolen Navy machineguns and Venezuelan exiles.

Charged with conspiracy in the theft of 25 machineguns from Bush Field, near Augusta, last April 13 were:

Karl John Eisenhart, 50, of Ellicott City, Md., owner of a charter air cargo company and one-time diplomatic representative in Latin America; Edward Browder, jr., of Amarillo, Tex.; J. Meredith Russell, 24, of Baltimore, and Manuel L. Fuego, no address.

The guns were put aboard a privately-owned surplus Navy bomber, and flown to Baltimore where they were concealed in a palatial hideout near Ellicott City. Twenty-one of the 25 weapons eventually were found in the basement of the mansion, on a 400-acre estate owned by Eisenhart. The guns were reported by the Venezuelan Embassy to have been "destined for Venezuela."

The Embassy said the venture was undertaken in behalf of a group of Venezuelan exiles.

Chinese Take Chefoo; Red Forces Split

Nanking, Oct. 1 (AP).—The government announced today the quick conquest of Chefoo, important Shantung Peninsula city only 110 miles south of Russian occupied Dairen. The victory cut the main supply line between Communists in Manchuria and those south of the Great Wall.

While the 15-day campaign was being concluded, four Communist divisions which had infiltrated into government territory on the Kiangsu-Anhwei-Honan border had halted operation of the Pukow-Tientsin railroad near Suhsien, 40 miles south of Hsuchow, and had brought Suhsien itself under attack.

Two More Injured At Hudson River Pier

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Two men were injured, a third suffered from shock and a fourth escaped unharmed today when two sections of the front wall of the burned out Hudson River Pier 57 collapsed.

Three of the men were marine surveyors who were examining damage from the five-million-dollar fire which had been burning since Sunday night.

U. S. Movies Facing Danish Ultimatum

Copenhagen, Oct. 1 (AP).—Svend Aage Heriksen, Danish manager of Paramount, said today the government would stop all American movies tomorrow unless the United States Motion Picture Export Association agrees to a decree limiting American film business in Denmark.

The government proposals would limit the withdrawal of profits from Denmark, and fix prices at which distribution rights may be sold. The decree also established a maximum earning power for each film.

Expeditionaries Captured in Cuba . . .

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

THEIR "D-DAY" NEVER CAME—Instead of invading the Dominican Republic, these expeditionaries landed in a concentration yard at Camp Columbia, Cuba, where they are charged with seditious movements against the armed forces of Cuba. They are among some 1500 men of an expeditionary force which was broken up by the Cuban Army and Navy before their ships got away from the island

Cuba to Free Nearly 1200 of Invasion Force

Havana, Oct. 1 (AP).—Magistrate Evelio Tabio of the supreme trial in custody for participation in an bunal criminal court announced today that nearly 1200 men now expeditionary movement intended to overthrow the Dominican Republic government of President Rafael Trujillo would be released tomorrow.

Only the leaders of the expeditionary force, broken up by the Cuban army and navy, will be held, Tabio said.

The group to be freed includes 360 expeditionaries now being held in the Army's camp Columbia and another group of about 800 who surrendered aboard two of the expedition's ships Tuesday and were put aboard trains in Antilla for Havana.

The newspaper Hoy published today a diary of a trooper in the expeditionary force which said he was given rifle practice for 13 days at the military and civic institute at Holquin. The institute is under the control of the Cuban minister of education.

The secretariat of Trujillo said today in Ciudad Trujillo, capital of the Dominican Republic, that it was informed the Soviet embassy in Guatemala, was involved in equipping the force.

"The Dominican government has received news that Julio Cesar Martinez, a member of the Communist international brigade x x x had declared in Havana that a part of the arms they were using were purchased by the Guatemalan government in Argentina and sent to Cuba," the secretariat said.

Soviet Vetoes Two for U. N.

relations had been restored with Bulgaria, Austin prefaced his vote on that country with a vehement attack on the Bulgarian government.

"During the past year," he said, "Bulgaria has clearly demonstrated that it still does not wish to have friendly relations with one of its neighbors—Greece—which it invaded and occupied during the late war.

"On the contrary, by its actions in supporting guerillas fighting against the Greek government and by hampering the activities of the United Nations investigation committee, the Bulgarian government has, in fact, acted in a manner which constitutes a threat to peace.

"Nine of the eleven members of the Security Council recently found that conduct of Bulgariao constituted such a threat. My government cannot consider that Bulgaria is eligible for membership in the United Nations as a peace loving state."

Cites Petkov Case

The trial and execution of Nikola Petkov, opposition leader, last week "has shocked the civilized world," he declared. "These arrests are continuing and with the arbitrary dissolution of the Agrarian Union party by the Assembly, virtually every voice has been raised against the dictatorship of the small Communist minority in Bulgaria has been stilled."

In today's action by the Council, the Soviet tactic was to get a "yes" or "no" vote simultaneously on all five—an al lor none vote. In this Russia was helped by the alertness of Poland which last week presented a resolution providing for simultaneous action on all five. This resolution, therefore, had priority when the Council assembled.

The American tactics, supported by the other eight members, were to obtain a separate vote on each country.

If the Soviet wishes had prevailed, the United States would have been placed in a position of having to approve the membership of the three satellites it wanted to bar from the United Nations, in order to win membership for Italy and Finland.

Or Austin would have had to register a "no" vote against Italy and Finland in order to prevent membership of Bulgaria, Hungary and Romania.

Soviet Assails United States For Lack of 'Cooperation'

permanent seats on the Council, and expressed confidence that the overwhelming majority of the Assembly would "find a correct solution to this problem."

Beneath the statement lay a constitutional dispute in which both the Soviet Union and the United States were basing themselves upon conflicting interpretations of Article 23 of the Charter. United Nations officials contend that each is built on false premises and has no legal basis.

Article 23 says the Assembly shall elect such members, "due regard being specially paid in the first instance to the contribution of members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to other purposes of the organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution."

The Russians insist—and the Americans agree—that "equitable geographical distribution" means a seat for the eastern European bloc in addition to the permanent seat of the Soviet Union itself. At the first Assembly early in 1946 it was agreed that the British Commonwealth, Latin American and eastern Europe should each have one of the nonpermanent seats.

The Russians now go further, however, and argue that each respective region has the right to name its own candidate. Here the Americans emphatically disagree. Yesterday the United States proposed Czechoslovakia, a member of the Soviet bloc, but Russia insisted on the Ukraine instead, and the Czechs, to their own vast relief, got only eight votes.

What really causes the unusual bitterness behind the scenes, however, is a brand-new American contention that the Ukraine is not eligible for the Security Council since it is nothing but a constituent "republic" of the Soviet Union.

The Americans base their case on the first part of Article 23, which speaks of Council members' ability to "contribute" to keeping peace and security. Since the Ukraine is not an independent nation, and has no armed forces of its own, the Americans argue it can make no "contribution beyond what the Soviet Union can make already. The same would apply to Byelo-Russia.

At the Yalta conference early in 1945 Generalissimo Stalin got the approval of President Roosevelt and later of Prime Minister Churchill, to the admission of the Ukraine and by Byelo-Russia to the United Nations. They were treated as fullfledged members.

Now, however, the United States insists that these "republics" cannot sit on the Security Council. There is no specific mention of their status in the charter, nor, according to delegates who attended the birth of the United Nations, was it ever brought up publicly at the San Francisco conference or privately in meetings of the American delegation.

Surgeon Links Deformities With Crime

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP).—A plastic surgeon who has operated on 376 penitentiary inmates in a 10-year experiment expressed the belief today their ugliness or deformities may have served as the spark that started them off in crime.

The operations to improve the appearances of the convicts were performed at the Illinois State Penitentiary near Joliet by Dr. John F. Pick of Chicago. He reported that only .9 per cent of the patients undergoing the surgery had been returned to the institution as crime repeaters—a figure which he said was "markedly below the usual percentage."

Furthermore, the surgeon added, there was improvement in the behavior of the convicts at the prison after the operation.

He told the International College of Surgeons:

It is felt that where bodily defects or gross features exist in the youthful delinquent, who all his life has been referred to as 'Monkey-Face', 'One-Eared,' 'Fish-Face,' 'Dog-Ears' or 'Limpy' that such defects be corrected and their trigger value removed before the boy delinquent becomes a man criminal."

Dr. Pick of Northington General Hospital, Tuscaloosa, Ala., who has done plastic surgery at Walter Reed Hospital in Washington, D. C., made these points:

The project was begun in 1937 around a nucleus of six "problem" inmates at the prison. One was a young man born with ears pinned against his head in a kind of upside-down position. The second had a gross foot deformity and was unable to hold any job long. The third "seemingly got along well in life" until he lost his nose. The fourth had webbed hands and feet and the fifth was covered from head to foot with unsightly painful skin tumors.

Carrier Coral Sea Is Commissioned

Sullivan Cites Possible Role If Nation Should Be Threatened by Aggressor

Portsmouth, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—The United States is determined to resist aggression, Secretary of the Navy John L. Sullivan asserted today at the commissioning ceremonies for the 90-million-dollar aircraft carrier Coral Sea.

Last of three huge 45,000-ton flattops laid down during the war, the Coral Sea has been more than three years under construction.

Like her sister ships, the Midway and the Franklin D. Roosevelt, she has a flight deck nearly 1(feet long, and can launch more than 100 planes.

"The Navy believes," Sullivan said, "that this is the finest ship that can be built. Into it has gone all that was learned in the hard school of war. It is a piece of America afloat."

He said it "may some day be called upon to hold the line while the Nation musters its power for war."

Air Force's Command Setup Streamlined by Symington

Langley Field, Va., promoted to lieutenant general. Spaatz said the advancement "recognized the great importance of this command" which provides close support to Army ground forces.

Three of General McNarney's main aides at Wright Field also received a boost in rank. They are:

Maj. Gen. Benjamin W. Chidlaw, deputy commander of the Air Material Command to be a lieutenant general.

Industrial Side Stressed

Brig. Gen. Franklin O. Carroll, Wright Field director of research and development, promoted to major general.

Col. Horace A. Shepard, director of procurement and industrial planning at Wright Field, to be a brigadier.

Symington said the assignment of an outstanding four-star general to head the Air Materiel Command at Wright Field and the promotion of his top assistants indicates the emphasis the new Air Forces is placing on expert business management and the industrial side of the military arm.

General Rawlings' promotion and that of his chief aide conforms to the same policy, the Air Secretary said.

Three Other Promotions

"We aim to get the most and best for the least," Symington told a press conference.

Three other promotions were announced by Symington: Brig. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, commander of the Alaskan Air Command to be major general; Col. Edward H. White, assistant air comptroller, and Col. John B. Montgomery, executive to the Air Force Secretary to be brigadiers.

All of the promotions are to temporary rank. They are recess nominations and must be confirmed by the Senate, the announceemnt said.

The reorganization revealed that guided missiles have become a function of the operations division of the Air Force. General Spaatz said that this does not mean such missiles hav ereached the point of operational use but that they must begin to plan for it.

Effective Combat Groups

Spaatz said the Air Force now has 34 combat groups at effective, peace-time strength. Demobilization reduced the AAF to practically no effective combat groups, he stated, and added that "by the turn of the year we anticipate we will have 55 effective combat groups."

Funds were appropriated for maintaining the Air Force at 55 active groups at full, peace-time strength and 15 others at skeletonized strength.

Spaatz said that when the Air Force fills out its 55 groups, it will be comparable in equipment with the air forces of other world powers, not first, in numerical strength, but "I think far superior" to others in training and ability to operate.

"Pyramid" Organization

Symington described the new Air Force organization as a "pyramid" type, as it reduces the number of officials reporting to the chief of staff. Here'se the way the new chain of command will operate:

Directly under Spaatz will be the air inspector, Maj. Gen. Junius W. Jones, and the air board. Maj. Gen. Hugh J. Knerr continues as its secretary.

Under Spaatz and Vandenberg will be the three deputy chiefs of staff and air comptroller, the Secretary of the Air Staff, Brig. Gen. Bryant L. Boatner, the air adjutant general, Col. H. G. Culton, and headquarters commandant, Lieut. Col. C. B. Burdette.

Five Operations Units

There will be three main sections and two other separate units under the deputy chief of staff for operations. Maj. Gen. E. E. Partridge will be director of training and requirements; Maj. Gen. Otto P. Weyland will be director of plans and operations, and Maj. Gen. George C. McDonald, director of intelligence.

Brig. Gen. W. L. Richardson will head the new guided missiles unit of operations and Brig. Gen. F. L. Ankebrandt continues as director of air communications. Partridge will serve as acting operation sdeputy until Norstad is released by the Army.

General Edwards will have two officials reporting directly to him as deputy chief of staff for personnel and administration. They are Brig. Gen. John E. Upston, director of personnel, and Brig. Gen. E. B. Lyon, director of administrative services. Officials said they expected that the Air Surgeon, Air Chaplain, Air Judge Advocate, Air Provost Marshal and Air Finance Officer would be placed under the administrative director, though this was not settled. Edwards will have Brig. Gen. R. W. Burns as his assistant.

Other Top Officials

The deputy chief of staff for material, General Craig, will have five top officials reporting to him through his assistant, Maj. Gen. E. M. Powers. They are: Maj. Gen. L. C. Craigie, director of research and development; Brig. Gen. F. M. Hopkins, director of procurement and industrialZphH procurement and industrial planning; Brig. Gen. Robert Kauch, director of air installations; Brig. Gen. L. P. Whitten, director of supply and services; and Maj. Gen. W. E. Kepner, chief of special weapons group.

Officials said that probably the Air Engineer, the Air Ordnance Officer, the Air Quartermaster and the Air Chemical Officer will be placed under one of the materiel section directors.

Under the Air Comptroller will be four sections. Col. C. W. Cecil is made chief of statistical control, Col R. S. Macrum, chief of budget and fiscal, Col. P. M. Spicer, chief of program analysis and Lieut. Col. W. I. Miller, head of the cost control group.

New Group Will Seek Facts On Maryland Fisheries Waste

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 1 (AP).—The Maryland Committee on Utilization of Fisheries Byproducts held its organization meeting today and decided to gather information on available fisheries waste in the State.

The session was held aboard the State boat Potomac.

Gilbert H. Moore, executive secretary of the Maryland Commercial Fishermen's Association, was chosen chairman of the new group, which will attempt to see that an estimated 10 million pounds of waste is put to commercial use.

Moore said he will make a quick check to get a figure on waste for the group's next meeting, October 15, at the Board of Natural Resource's office here.

Preliminary work has been done by scientists of the Department of Research and Education, headed by Dr. R. V. Truitt.

Dr. Truitt and Theodore M. Miller of Rock Hall, a member who was formerly with the department, discussed research studies today before the new group.

The committee will function under the Board of Natural Resources, with the Department of Research and Education acting as coordinator of information.

Moore said, "It appears that the potential scrap value is tremendous. It will be our purpose to interest packers and buyers in filleting fish, which will make more scrap available. The bulk of Maryland fish products is now probably shipped whole and the possible by-products thrown away."

This Chain Letter May Get a Man 16,178 Women

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—Richmond Postmaster Fergus McCree merely smiled and declined to get excited over the appearance of another type of chain letter, the second new type called to his attention within the week.

The letter reads:

"This chain letter was started in Reno in hopes of bringing happiness to tired business and professional men.

"Unlike most chain letters, this one does not cost any money. Simply send a copy to five male friends, then bundle up your wife and send her to the fellow on top of the list.

"When your name comes to the top of the list you will receive 16,178 women.

"Have faith. Do not break this chain. One man broke it and got his own wife back."

No Serious Recession Soon, Sloan Believes

New York, Oct. 1 (INS).—Alfred P. Sloan, jr., chairman of General Motors Corp., said today he does not see 'how it could be possible" for America to have a serious recession in the next two years.

Sloan, in an address at the New York preview luncheon for General Motors streamlined "Train of Tomorrow" said:

"Inquiring around among my friends in the big industrial operations, I find there is no hesistancy at all in going ahead and making capital investments to rehabilitate their plants and expand their capacity."

Trolley Ends Half Century Of Service

Frederick, Md., Oct. 1 (Spl.)—The Frederick-Middletown trolley, which has served commuters in the Fulmers-Clifton-Braddock Heights-Middletown area for more than half a century, has made its last run.

Its bell clanging and its whistle shrieking, the travel-weary streetcar rolled into Middletown terminal last night on what was scheduled to be the last leg of its final round trip. A victim of progress, the ancient trolley has been replaced by modern buses which took over the Frederick-Middletown route today.

About 60 persons living along the route, most of whom have been regular customers during the line's 51 years of service, accompanied Henry Magaha and Maurice Ramsburg, veteran motormen, on the last trip. The "sentimental journey" was climaxed when, after the trolley rolled into the terminal, the passengers presented the two trainmen a purse in appreciation of their combined 39 years of service on the line.

Despite the promise of improved service under the new bus schedules, most of the old-timers expressed regret at the trolley's passing and even the whistle sounded off on a wistful note as it rolled into the terminal.

The farewell journey was punctuated by the reminiscences of crewmen and passengers alike, who described operation of the line as a "real personalized service." On numerous occasions, they recalled, children unaccompanied by their parents were left in the care of the motorman; merchandise frequently was delivered by the train's crew to homes along the route, and occasionally, the trolley stopped to permit removal of children's toys which had been carelessly left along the tracks.

With bus service already under way in the area served by the trolley, the old car tracks will be removed and the metal used for salvage by the Hagerstown and Frederick Railway, operators of the line.

Universal Training Opposed by Taft

Guard Reserve of Expert Technicians Proposed Instead by Republican Leader

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Cheyenne, Wyo., Oct. 1.—Senator Robert A. Taft tonight proposed a National Guard reserve of expert, technically trained men in lieu of universal military training.

In a statement to newsmen he came out in flatfooted opposition to the Administration's training program, now pending in the House, and outlined an alternative defense plan.

He said compulsory military training "would force the same policy on every nation in the world and prove an obstacle to peace. In the end I think it would encourage war, rather than discourage it."

Parts Company With Dewey

For the tfirst time on this western swing, Taft was publicly parting company with Thomas E. Dewey on an issue, without mention of his name. Dewey is on record for compulsory training.

Taft, who previously had merely stated his opposition, without developing his views, again called for "the most expert, best-trained and best equipped army in the world," strong enough to resist attack by any combination of nations.

He conceded organized reserves should be provided to back up the million and a half men in the armed forces, but denied universal training is the best method.

"I believe they could be secured on a voluntary aid basis through a National Guard organization more closely coordinated with the Department of National Defense," he said.

"If physical training is the result sought, it could be obtained through the stimulation of physical education programs in all our schools assisted by the Federal Government.

"We should explore every possibility of providing such an expert technical reserve by the best possible means and not plunge into a huge bureaucratic organization required for universal compulsory training by the Army."

Girl, 17, Admits Killing Her Baby

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—Thelma Louise Hoshall, 17-year-old Howard County girl, was in custody of her parents today while a judge pondered what punishment to mete out after convicting her of manslaughter in the death of her baby.

The unmarried girl pleaded guilty and admitted that five days after the birth of the son she strangled him with a bathrobe cord and left the body in a baggage locker at a Baltimore bus terminal.

Judge Joseph Sherbow heard her story in Criminal Court but withheld sentence pending an investigation by the probation department.

Sunday Liquor Sale Ban Asked By Md. Churches

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—Enactment of a law banning the sale of liquor on Sundays in Maryland was urged today by the Lord's Day Alliance of Maryland, an interdenominational group representing about 2000 Protestant churches throughout the State.

"The vast majority of the most responsible citizens of our State are opposed to the sale of alcoholic beverages on Sunday," the alliance said in a statement presented at a meeting of the Maryland Legislative Council.

The Rev. J. Franklin Bryan, executive secretary of the alliance, read from the statement, which said Sunday liquor "creates disturbances in the vicinity of many churches and endangers the lives of people as they go to and from the house of God."

Senate President Joseph Byrnes (D., Balt. 5th) said "the council will give the question serious consideration.

The Legislative Council has been asked by the General Assembly to "study the question of the sale of alcoholic beverages on Sunday and to make recommendations to the next General Assembly."

Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 1 (AP).—The fate of the annual Alsatia Mummers parade, which usually attracts scores of thousands here on Halloween, hung in the balance today when the parade committee and Chief of Police Max W. Richard became deadlocked over the proposed route. Richard said he would not issue a permit for the parade unless it is conducted on the streets he outlined. The committee announced the dispute would be carried to the mayor and council for final action.

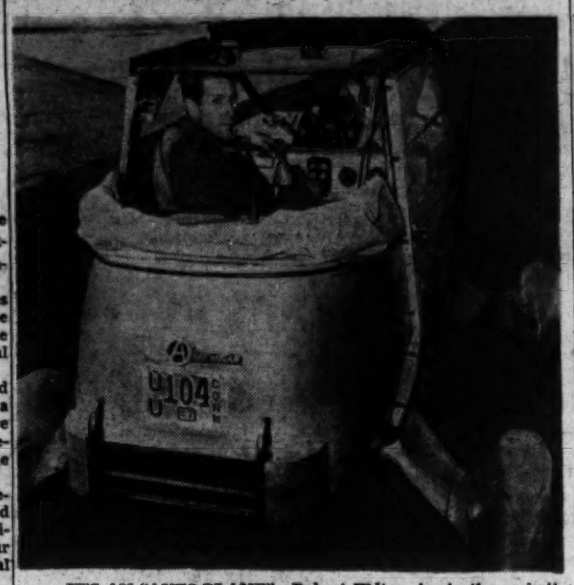
It's Not a Bird . . .



. . . IT'S AN "AUTO-PLANE"—Robert Fulton, jr., in the cockpit of his combination auto and airplane, pictured as he prepared to drive away from the Capitol yesterday

Robert Fulton Flies Auto-Plane Here, Drives About in Fuselage

A pilot from Connecticut landed his small plane at National Airport yesterday and with a mere flick of the wrist removed its wings and tail. He then drove to Washington in the fusilage.

The pilot, Robert Fulton, jr., 30, great-grandnephew of the inventor of the steamboat, rolled the plane in on four wheels, while airport mechanics gaped at the auto license plate and auto headlights on its nose.

In approximately five minutes he had removed the three-blade propeller and rolled down a wheel on each wing and the tail. He then removed the rear half of the plane and its wings after unfastening several levers.

Standing there was a small aluminum two-seater auto with a rolled-down canvas top, resembling a convertible coupe.

Statistics on Fulton's invention, which is now before the Civil Aeronautics Board for approval, include:

Wingspread, length and height are comparable with those of a small four-passenger light plane.

Air speed is over 100 miles an hour. Safe ground speed runs up to 55 miles an hour.

Gas tank holds between 25 and 35 gallons, enough to drive it 750 miles as an auto.

Foot pedals serve as right and left ruddar pedals in the air and as foot brake and clutch on the ground. There is no gear shift. Gas is fed by a hand throttle in the air and by a foot throttle on the ground.

The estimated retail price of the "Airphibian" is between $6000 and $9000.

Required Year to Build

Fulton, who toiled about a year over his invention before it was completed last November, flew down from his small plant in Danbury, Conn., in about 2½ hours.

The plane is not his first invention. He has invented a "gun-air structor," used in the training of pilots, and other military devices used in gunnery and aeronautical training, he said.

Water Control Board Grants Waste Dumping

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—The State Water Control Board today granted the petitions of four industrial plants to dump additional wastes into Virginia streams, but included in each permit a proviso designed to prevent the increase of pollution.

The board also agreed to defer a decision on the State's application to discharge lime-grinding plant wastes from a plant at Appomattox.

The board will be in session again tomorrow to hear applications for additional municipal sewage discharges from Richmond, Luray, Buena Vista, Franklin and suburban Covington.

Romney Asks His Conviction Be Set Aside

Kenneth Romney, former House sergeant-at-arms, now under 1-to-3 year sentence on charges of defrauding the Government, yesterday asked the United States Court of Appeals to set aside the verdict.

In a brief filed yesterday, Romney asserted that the $143,863 shortage in the House bank, which led to his conviction, involved money belonging to individual Congressmen. Hence, he asserted, he could not be legally charged with defrauding the Government.

In addition, the brief alleged, the grand jury which indicted Romney was improperly selected in that, the brief said, all those who did not wish to serve were automatically excused. This, Romney declared, resulted in a volunteer panel.

Romney was convicted by a District Court jury last May. He is free on $5000 bond.

McGrath to Play 'Active' Role As Democratic Party Leader

By The Associated Press

Senator J. Howard McGrath, who is slated to become chairman of the Democratic National Committee, said after a talk with President Truman yesterday that he intends to "be more active" than his predecessor.

The Phode Island lawmaker told reporters that Robert E. Hannegan, who is giving up the assignment October 29 because of his health, necessarily could not give party activity as much attention as he wished.

McGrath was chosen by Mr. Truman as one of a "great team" to direct the Democrats' 1948 Presidential campaign. The other team members is McGrath's old schoolmate, Gael Sullivan, who has agreed to stay on as executive director at Mr. Truman's request.

Reporters asked McGrath how the responsibility would be divided between the two.

"I want it understood," he replied, "that the responsibility rests with me, and I intend to assume it."

He added that he plans an active leadership, and will work in the field as well as at party headquarters. This apparently was intended as a reply to criticism suggesting that McGrath would be unable to give sufficient attention to party affairs while keeping his Senate seat.

Sullivan is expected to spend most of his time in the field, using the political talent he developed under Edward J. Kelly.

Homeopaths to Pay Hahnemann Tribute

Opening a three-day conference at the Statler Hotel and the Pan American Union today, 150 members of the Pan American Homeopathic Medical Congress and the Southern Homeopathic Medical Association will pay tribute to Samuel Christian Friedrich Hahnemann.

Hahnemann was an early 19th century German physician who formulated the doctrine that the cure of disease is effected by drugs capable of producing the disease symptoms in healthy individuals.

Big Units Granted 7-8% Rent Boosts

Reflect Greater Costs in Large Apartment Houses, Cogswell Says

By Edward F. Ryan
Post Reporter

District Rent Administrator Robert F. Cogswell said yesterday that appeals made by owners of large Washington apartment houses for relief from rising costs have been netting them rent increases averaging between 7 and 8 per cent.

That estimate was a guess, said Cogswell, but is is backed up by rent boost record for large buildings in recent months. The increases contrast with the newly ordered 3 to 4 per cent increases for one-to-eight family buildings.

Cogswell said the difference is based on the fact that larger buildings have been more affected by general increases in maintenance costs, and the percentage raises reflect this, while the new order for smaller buildings is based solely on the increases in local property taxes and water rates.

Basis of Rent Raises

Under the new plan for 1-to-8-family dwellings, landlords can hike monthly rentals by the exact amount necessary to pay the difference between the present tax and water rates, and the charges of 1941. In any building, the new rents take effect when the landlord has filed with the rent office a sworn statement showing the tax increases and the new rent, and has given a copy to each tenant.

Cogswell said several thousand official forms on which the statements of the rent changes are to be made were distributed yesterday at his agency's office, 1740 Massachusetts ave. nw. Cogswell said some individual owners had obtained as many as 500 forms at once.

With the new rent order come these other developments:

Rufus S. Luck, spokesman for the District Building Owners and Managers Association, said his group has never given up its drive for rent increases, and that a new survey of costs of operating rental buildings is being made. He said the results will be turned over to Cogswell.

At the Capitol, Senators C. Douglass Buck (R., Del.) and John Sparkman (D., Ala.) both predicted Congress would have to extend national rent controls past the present February 29, 1948 expiration date.

Buck and Sparkman said they did not think the housing shortage would have eased enough to warrant end of rent controls on the dates set under present law.

New Appeals for Boosts

At the District Rent Control office, there were new appeals for rent boosts in large buildings. Howard Taylor applied for an average 12 per cent boost in rents for the 93 units at 1954 Columbia rd. nw.—the present rent range of $30 to $75 a month would become $34.50 to 86. T. F. Schneider applied for a nine per cent boost in rents of 68 units at Tilden Hall, 3945 Connecticut ave. nw.—the rent range is now $37.50 to $70 and would become $42.25 to 78.75.

In another case, Examiner James G. Tyson heard testimony on the proposal for rent increases for 76 units in nine Morris Cafritz apartment buildings. Tyson explained that the rent raises were asked for units expected to be vacated. He said the proposed increases range from 15 to 30 per cent. Previous increases for Cafritz properties have averaged about 9 per cent.

Tyson said the apartments are in buildings at 1020 19th st. nw., 2000 F st. nw., 2000 Connecticut ave. nw.; 1530 16th st nw.; 1445 Otis st. nw.; 1445 Ogden st. nw.; 3200 16th st. nw.; 1301 15th st. nw.; and the Greenway Apartments in the 3600 block, Minnesota ave. se.

Cogswell said there was no doubt that the demand for rent increases has stepped up in recent months. He suggested that an earlier factor in holding back applicatiions for rent increases was hte belief on the part of landlords that rent controls might not be extended. As an example of the upswing, there were 2942 applications for rent adjustments in the period from July 1 to December 31 last year. Of those 2801 were from landlords, and the others from tenants. In the first six months of this year there were 4802 applications, of which 4776 were from landlords.

Addition to Cost $380,000

The District was pay about $380,000 this fall to build an addition to Randall Junior High School, 1st and H sts. sw., Archie Hutson, director of construction, revealed yesterday.

The addition will include 15 classrooms and a cafeteria.

Bids for the project were opened yesterday by Chief Engineer Clerk P. M. Lumpkins. He reported J. D. Hedin Construction Co., 820 Michigan ave, ne., was lowest of four bidders with estimates totalling $380,000.

Hutson said the low bid was about 13 per cent below the latest District estimates for the job. "Work will begin just as quickly as we can get contracts completed," he declared. It will take approximately one year to finish the addition, he added.

Lumpkins also revealed that bids had been opened for making soil investigations for the proposed Montgomery Elementary School at 5th st. and New Jersey ave. nw.

Lowest of four bidders, he said, was Raymond Concrete Pile Co., 1731 K st. nw., with estimates of $900.

Hite School Prosecution To Be Pushed

Montgomery County State's Attorney Walter W. Dawson said yesterday he would present to the grand jury allegations that two Washington children were mistreated in a nearby Maryland nursery school.

He made the announcement as he launched another investigation into the license status of the Hite Nursery School on Rockville Pike in suburban Montrose.

Welfare officials said yesterday the school was denied a State license 16 months ago. Dawson said he would seek an indictment against Mrs. Maude C. Hite, school owner, on grounds of operating without a license.

Policeman Supports Charge

License status of the school came to light after complaints from a Washington couple that their two young children had not received proper treatment and that one of them was found tied in his crib in an overheated room.

Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Langlotz, 3221 Connecticut ave. nw., charge their two children, Wayne 2, and Ronald jr. 10 months, were found Sunday in an averheated, newly-painted and poorly ventilated room suffering from severe colds.

The children were placed in the school in May after the 18-year-old mother became ill.

The parents' allegations that Wayne was found in his crib with a cord tied to the foot of his sleepers and to the end of the crib was supported by Montgomery County Policeman Sergt. Marion Dayhoff.

Both children were taken from the school Monday and are now with the parents.

Dawson named Chief of Detectives Theodore F. Vollten, Dr. William A. Linthicum of Rockville and Detective Corpls. William Whalen and Carroll Miller to probe the Langlotz allegations. They visited the school yesterday morning and will meet this morning to compile a report for Dawson.

Reporter Visits School

Yesterday's developments disclosed:

1. That Mrs. Hite had applied to the Maryland department of Public Welfare for a school license in August of 1944 and was given "a long opportunity" to qualify for the permit.
2. That she was denied a license in May of 1946.
3. That the license denial was referred to the State's Attorney's office at that time.

Newsmen who asked permission to tour the three-story brick house-nursery school Tuesday were told to return yesterday. A Washington Post reporter found it in apparently comfortable condition.

Mrs. Hite has denied the charges made by Mr. and Mrs. Langlotz. She said she asked them to sign a statement removing her from responsibility when they wanted to take the children from the school Sunday. She added that she had called a doctor for them to treat their colds.

Rep. Harris Ellsworth Hurts Foot, Ends Tour

Rome, Oct. 1 (AP).—Rep. Harris Ellsworth (R., Oreg.) fractured a heel bone in alighting from a taxicab and has abandoned the tour of Germany and Austria with a House committee, it was disclosed today. He will sail for home Friday or Saturday.

22 Indicted, Four in Safe Job

Four men, charged with a $2250 safe robbery at the National Brick and Supply Co., Terra Cotta, were indicted for housebreaking by the grand jury yesterday.

They are Wilbur E. Riddle, 701 Chestnut ave., Falls Church, Va.; Clarence R. Gaier, 410 6th st. nw.; Joseph Herzon, 410 6th st. nw., and Oakley Locklear, no address given.

The grand jury returned 22 indictments, ignored charges in four cases.

Among those indicted was Robert L. Ray, 31, of 444 H st. nw., who had twice escaped from Arlington County jail where he was incarcerated on housebreaking charges.

Ray was indicted on two counts of housebreaking involving attempts to open safes at the City Finance Co., 515 8th st., se., and the Bradburg Heights Drug Store.

Two 17-year old youths were indicted on 5 counts for unauthorized use of automobiles, and two counts of housebreaking, while an alleged associate aged 16, was indicted on three counts of unauthorized use of autos. A fourth youth was indicted for housebreaking and larceny, and on one count of receiving stolen goods worth $266.

The auto charges involved appropriating parked cars for joyrides.

Clegg Probe Waits On Fireman Inquiry

'Priority' Investigation Delays Veteran's Police Case Indefinitely

Investigation of police brutality charges filed by Julius Willie Clegg, 26-year-old Negro war veteran, faces an indefinite delay in the office of the Corporation Counsel, The Washington Post learned last night.

Clegg, through his attorney, Roger Robb, has charged he was detained illegally by police at the First Precinct for 34 hours without being charged, and was beaten at the Detective Bureau by detectives.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton D. Korman, assigned to investigate the Clegg case, said last night he was spending full time on a "priority" probe of "demoralization" charges made by Fire Capt. Joseph W. Conroy against Fire Chief Clement Murphy. Consideration of the Clegg case will have to wait "at least until the end of next week," perhaps even later, he said.

Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West said he considered the Clegg case secondary to the Conroy probe. He stated Korman had been assigned to the Conroy investigation because "my whole office is swamped with work."

Rejoining Amputated Limb Held Possible by Surgeon

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP).—A New York surgeon expressed the opinion today that through the use of refrigeration in surgery a completely severed arm or leg could be rejoined successfully to the human body without loss of function.

Such experiments already have proved successful with human fingers and with whole limbs of dogs, Dr. L. W. Crossman told the International College of Surgeons.

He said surgeons had "amputated the legs of dogs, placed the legs in an ice box for 24 hours and then were able to successfully replace the limbs and have them heal to recove the full use of the part."

In refrigeration surgery, a mangled or infected extremity is packed with ice and preserved as long as several weeks or until the patient's condition is improved to the point where the member may be amputated or saved.

He said flatly that surgeons should allow a patient to recover strength while the limb is encased in ice, then permit the affected part to recover normal temperatures gradually.

He added that burns of the most extensive degree were best treated by refrigeration which he said prevented dlayed shock and infection.

Monro Carmichael

Monro Quits As President Of Air Line

Resignation of C. Bedell Monro as president of Capital Airlines and reorganization of the company's executive committee was announced yesterday.

Monro's announcement said he resigned because of "a grave difference of opinion" over the company's management. He lives at 109 Shadow rd., Chevy Chase, Md., and has been with the company or its predecessors 19 years.

Simultaneously, the line announced election of J. H. (Slim) Carmichael, veteran pilot and company executive vice president, to succeed Monro.

Named on the new executive committee were:

J. C. Herbert Bryant of Alexandria, Va; Dewey F. Gruenhagen, vice president of the Investor'h Syndicate, Inc., Minneapolis, Minn.; George R. Hann of Pittsburgh, and Charles H. Murchison, general counsel for the line.

Monro's resignation statement heartily endorsed election of Carmichael.

The line, oldest in the Nation with continuous existance, showed a first-quarter loss of $2,331,000 this year and a second-quarter loss of $196,657.

Carmichael, who lives on River rd., Bethesda, Md., is a native of Newark, N. J., and worked his way up through the ranks from pilot. He is one of the few holders of the Congressional Air Mail Pilots' Medal of Honor, awarded for heroism in landing safely a plane loaded with messengers after one engine had been torn from its mountings, carrying away part of the landing gear.

He said, upon acceptance of the new post, that he "made it plain I had full faith in Mr. Monro's policies."

Farben Gas Defied Masks, Chemist Says

Nurenberg, Germany, Oct. 1 (AP).—Nathaniel Elias, New York chemist, testified today that I. G. Farbenindustrie produced two gases so deadly that American masks carried in the last World War would have been useless.

He told a United States war crimes tribunal trying 23 directors of the trust that both Farben's "Tabun" and "Sarin" would have penetrated the usual type of gas mask.

Locusts Carry 'Ads' In Plea for Votes

Tientsin, China, Oct. 1 (AP).—Dr. Fu Chian-Kiang's campaign for election to the National Assembly is hopping right along.

Judge Orders Woman Given Mental Tests

A 47-year-old Foxhall Village housewife was remanded to Gallinger Hospital for mental observation by Municipal Court Judge George Neilson after a group of neighbors headed by Fulton Lewis, jr., radio commentator, appeared against her.

The defendent, Mrs. Agnes C. Pearson, 4408 Volta pl. nw., was arrested Tuesday on a warrant charging she had chased Lewis' daughter, Alice Elizabeth, 15, down the street "with a large stick in a menacing manner."

Miss Lewis testified that she was walking her dog in front of Mrs. Pearson's home when the defendant threatened her with a broom handle and later threw it at her.

Defense counsel Albert F. Graham told the court that Mrs. Pearson had a strong dislike for dogs and was provoked into any action she may have taken. He asked Miss Lewis if she had made any surley remarks to his client before the incident.

"I did not make any surly remarks," Miss Lewis replied quickly, "furthermore I am not sassy, sir."

She added that after Mrs. Pearson chased her and the dog, she threw the broomstick at them but missed.

Fulton Lewis, jr., took the stand and described several occasions on which he had seen Mrs. Pearson acting in an unusual manner. Two other neighbors testified in the same vein.

"We have here a chain of events which brings the defendants' sanity in to question," Judge Neilson said. He committed Mrs. Pearson for 30 days examination.

Budgets Ask 53 Millions For Building

More than a third of the District Government's spending would be for construction under the budget requests made by city department heads for the year starting next July 1.

Their proposals add up to a 53-million-dollar capital outlay program, compared with about 17 million appropriated for capital outlay this year.

Washington's three Commissioners, now working on the budget, are expected to make their sharpest cuts in the building proposals.

This year's total budget is about 95.5 million. City agency heads proposed spending nearly 144 million in the next year, and 37 per cent of that woul be for capital outlay. Officials have predicted the total would be cut to under 100 million to fit into expected revenues.

D. C. Delays Taking Over Armory Work

Operation and maintenance of the new National Guard Armory will be taken over by the District November 1, Edward P. Brooke, superintendent of buildings, announced yesterday.

The city had originally planned to provide custodial service at the armory, 19th and B sts. se., yesterday but lack of personnel forced a month's postponement, he revealed.

Selection of suitable persons from civil service registers is still in progress, he said.

The armory is being operated by the Public Buildings Administration with money transferred from the District's $209,000 appropriation for fiscal 1948.

These 3 tests in this room guarantee you rich coffee every time!

To bring you coffee of UNIFORM TASTE, Edwards is put to a TRIPLE-TEST! Tested once; twice, THREE times...to guarantee you the same rich flavor in every pound! Here in the spotless Edwards testing room, our experts taste each fragrant "test run" of coffee...compare and judge with the sensitive "know-how" gained through years of experience. Each test is unhurried and rigidly controlled. But from all three comes this assurance: that every pound of Edwards Coffee will be UNIFORMLY RICH!
1ST TEST: BEFORE COFFEES ARE BOUGHT.

Unusual as it seems, the Edwards people actually taste-test all the rich Central and South American coffees for the Edwards blend before they buy them. Result: Edwards buys only those rich coffees which meet the rigid Edwards standard.
2ND TEST: DURING BLENDING AND ROASTING.

During actual preparation of Edwards Coffee, samples of each batch are taste-tested...all to make sure each conforms to the famous Edwards formula...to the one, rich Edwards flavor. The tasting is much like that you do yourself in making a favorite cake.
3RD TEST: FROM YOUR GROCER'S SHELF.

To make triply sure that Edwards is uniformly rich, Edwards Coffee is taken at random from your grocer's shelf at regular intervals and tested a third time. Triple tested: every cup, every pound the same... just another step in "the Edwards way" of assuring Washingtonians the kind of coffee they prefer.

Rent Boost

The actual-cost rent increases authorized by District Rent Administrator Cogswell for individual dwellings and small apartment houses probably is the most reasonable that can be expected. Landlords are to be permitted to add to individual monthly rent bills the prorated cost of recent increases in taxes and water fees. Although the hike will not affect present leases, it will apply to an estimated 25,000 to 35,000 Washington residents who rent their dwellings on a month-to-month basis. The probable increase will average between 3 and 4 per cent. Certainly this boost, based on demonstrable increases in costs in each instance, is infinitely preferable to the larger blanket raise irrespective of costs that has frequently been demanded. In this respect we believe renters have reason to be grateful.

In opposition to Mr. Cogswell's action, the Washington Chapter of Americans for Democratic Action has an argument of some validity. It does not follow, for instance, that because a landlord's tax and water bills have increased, his net income has suffered in comparison with what it was in 1941. Taxes and water are relatively minor factors in the cost of running an apartment. Occupancy, for example, has risen to nearly the saturation point, and the level of maintenance in many instances has decreased. In some cases the net rental income today, even in view of substantial increases in janitors' salaries and the price of coal and other materials, is still considerably above 1941. Indeed, the ADA cites testimony before the Senate Banking and Currency Committee indicating that nationally the operating income for small structures has increased 43 per cent since 1939 and that the increase in net income has been several times this figure. Thus a case could be made that in fairness any rent increases granted small landlords should be based on the status of their net income rather than merely on boosts in tax and water charges.

Whether this interpretation is acceptable depends on how the function of rent control is to be construed. Mr. Cogswell envisages his task as one of preventing undue increases rather than of maintaining rents at static levels. In this he is on solid ground; that is the language of the District Rent Control Act. Mr. Cogswell's job is to be fair to landlords as well as to tenants. Something in addition to increased cost of operation that he cannot overlook is the fact that the cost of living has gone up for the people who derive their income from rents as for the tenants. To force them to remain on the same income they had in 1941 when other incomes have risen generally would be just as great discrimination as to grant unwarranted rent hikes. Without apologizing for greedy landlords who seek to exploit their position, we think there still is no reason to give in to the cries of those who wish to proscribe landlords as a class.

Diversion Maneuver

Under severe pressure from the cool and thoughtful proposals of Secretary Marshall, Mr. Vishinsky is slashing out in all directions, with redoubtable aid from Molotov in Moscow. Molotov even refuses to apologize for Pravda's identification of President Truman with Hitler. The defense, of course, is offense. And Soviet offense has now ascended into the stratosphere of offensiveness with the stigmatization of our President as a warmonger. This is Pravda's charge by innuendo, and, since neither Vishinsky in New York nor Molotov in Moscow accepted the invitation to repudiate it, it is a charge for which they must accept responsibility. In one breath Moscow insists on our Government controlling our free press and in another disowns any control over its own controlled press. Could absurdity be carried further?

From Mr. Vishinsky the American people would do well to turn to former Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson. Mr. Stimson utterly repudiates the loose thinking of a handful of Americans who are talking of a "preventive war," but at the same time he frankly recognizes that "the Soviet government has steadily pursued an obstructive and unfriendly course." No sensible American, he goes on to say in an illuminating article in the current issue of Foreign Affairs "can now ignore this fact . . . Americans who think they can make common cause with the present-day communism are living in a world that does not exist." Mr. Stimson does not expect the Russians to make war. But this expectation is based on the assumption that "the Western non-Communist world is going to survive in growing economic and political stability." We could do with Mr. Stimson's faith in the ability of western Europe to recover. But it will not come of itself—it must be encouraged, and in our own interest. For, as the strength of democracy in both Europe and America is increased, the danger of Soviet aggression will diminish.

Full Circle

In our view the United States does not have a leg to stand on in its arguments against the admission of the Ukraine to the Security Council. There is no such thing as limited membership of the United Nations. Every member who is not a Great Power is of equal standing, and therefore eligible for membership of the United Nations. To be sure, the Ukraine is not a state, and it has no ambassadors abroad, except a delegation to the United Nations. It will of course vote at Moscow's bidding, as did its predecessor, Poland. The fact remains that the Ukraine was solemnly admitted as an independent, let alone a peace-loving, member-state of the United Nations.

Far be it from us to deny that the admission of the Ukraine was a farce. It should never have occurred. The farce dates back to the conference at Yalta where Mr. Roosevelt was already suffering from the malady from which he died. Generalissimo Stalin threw a bombshell into the proceedings by asking blandly for the admission of the 16 Soviet republics. At this Mr. Roosevelt demurred, saying that this was equivalent to a United States request for the entry of the 48 States of our Federal Union. Whereupon Stalin, showing signs of agitation, is reputed to have walked around the table, and, after reseating himself, to have reminded the President of the sacrifice and particularism of the Ukraine. If the Ukraine's sacrifices were not deemed worthy credentials for membership of the United Nations, then let Roosevelt and Churchill bear in mind the fact that Stalin had his quota of political troubles with constituent minorities. Roosevelt, a politician himself, saw the point at once, and settled with Stalin for a couple of seats, for White Russia as well as the Ukraine. For a long time this "compromise" was kept from the American people along with other agreements which only by a stretch of the imagination could be held back out of regard for security. It looked as if Roosevelt regretted his compliance.

Our delegation at Lake Success is citing Article 23 of the Charter as grounds for opposing the Ukraine. Article 23 defines the composition of the Security Council. In filling the nonpermanent seats, due regard must be "specially paid" to the "contribution of members of the United Nations to the maintenance of international peace and security and to the other purposes of the organization, and also to equitable geographical distribution." The background of this article was the feeling on the part of the "middle powers" that they should be specially considered. But there was no preference system set up. The Ukraine abuts on Poland, and thus the specification on geographical distribution is met. Moreover, the contribution to peace and security of the Ukraine is no more meager than that of other nations we could mention, say, Argentina, which we have just boosted to a seat on the Security Council.

Not the least ironical part of the performance, indeed, is this connection between Argentina and the two Soviet satellites. At San Francisco our delegation was so ashamed of the Yalta pledge that they tried to renege on it. By smoke-room intrigue the United States and the Latins engineered a scheme to make the entry of the Ukraine and White Russia dependent on a vote for Argentina. It worked, but not before our delegation stood accused of sharp trading. This time Argentina is elected to the Security Council, but we are looking down our noses at the Ukraine. Nemesis is catching up on us in respect of this as of other instances of our lack of statesmanship at Yalta, and we are finding out, in the words of the German philosopher, that a wrong once committed grows in geometrical ratio as time goes on. We see no alternative but in this respect to accept the logic of our mistake and the wording of the Charter, and to make our choice on more persuasive facts than a bad conscience.

Enlisting The Public

The President's public casualness in creating the Citizens' Food Committee has been in no way relieved by the indefiniteness of its chairman, Charles Luckman, at his initial press conference yesterday. To be sure, Mr. Luckman is at the very start of an enormously difficult undertaking and is obliged to accommodate his pace to the gait of an unwieldy, variegated group of colleagues. And no doubt the vagueness of his directive from the President is largely responsible for the vagueness of his exhortation to the public. "I am pinning my faith," he declared when he was first appointed, "in the 140 million people of America. They are the committee." The faith will not be misplaced if Mr. Luckman will but tell his committee of 140 million specifically what he wants—that is to say, what detailed sacrifices or self-denials conservation entails.

But of course Mr. Luckman's committee, even if joined by the entire 140 million, cannot of itself get to Europe the food necessary to save that continent from famine, however effectively it may practice conservation here at home. The fruits of conservation must be garnered by the Government. And it is clear that they must be garnered by some sterner power than persuasion. What is needed is authority similar to that exercised last year under the Second War Powers Act, now lapsed, to allocate essential foodstuffs at the source. Without such allocation—a simple putting of first things first—grains needed for the relief of human hunger will be fed to cattle or wasted, comparatively speaking, in the manufacture of beverages and other nonessentials. Equally, the Government will need authority to secure the boxcars and ships needed to transport foodstuffs overseas.

We have urged the reinstitution of consumer rationing—as much for the sake of dramatizing the crisis as for the sake of distributing equitably the supply of food available for home consumption when Europe's minimum needs have been met. Apparently, judging from the observations in last Sunday's Washington Post by former Deputy OPA Administrator Paul O'Leary, rationing at the consumer level could not get under way before next summer; if this is the case, it could not serve the immediate need. Rationing at the source, however, as urged in the Harriman Committee report—that is to say, allocation—is urgent as well as indispensable if Mr. Luckman's program of voluntary conservation is to achieve its primary objective of getting the saved food abroad—and quickly.

Mr. Luckman's task will be much more difficult—will, indeed, be rendered futile—unless President Truman acts to make the Government an effective instrument in this campaign to save Europe from famine. It is heartening that the President has overridden the seeming indifference to Europe's plight of Secretary Anderson and has accepted the goal of 570 million bushels of grain recommended by Secretary Harriman's committee. Nevertheless, the American public is unlikely to take seriously Mr. Luckman's appeal for conservation if the Government acts lethargically—as though no emergency existed. The first step must be a clear show of determination by the President. And the indispensable evidence will be a prompt call to Congress to grant him the powers requisite to effective action.

Verboten

The bars that Soviet Russia has erected around its country have been used to keep out an Assistant Secretary of State and senatorial travelers. There should be only one reply from the State Department. And that was contained in the last report issued early this year by the special House Committee on postwar planning headed by Representative Colmer. The committee insisted on a policy of the "strictest reciprocity." Evidence in support of such a policy has accumulated at a rapid clip since the testimony collected by the Colmer Committee called for it. This is what the committee, after giving instance after instance of secrecy and discrimination, said:

> It is therefore the opinion of the committee that the strictest reciprocity should be applied to Russia in limiting entry into the United States of Russian diplomats and government agents to the number of our own representatives in Russia. Exclusion of Russians from Japan and our other occupied areas should parallel closing of their zones to our entry. At the present time, the committee is given to understand that there are over 1200 Russian representatives in the United States as contrasted with less than 200 American representatives in the U.S.S.R. Extension of the same principles should be made to Russian-controlled zones to secure the adequate protection of our representatives there. Technicians should be similarly treated, though it would certainly be advantageous to get as wide as possible an exchange of students, bona fide journalists, and "pure" scientists. It is a well-known fact that employes of American legations in these zones, as well as in Russia proper, have been subjected to arrest and imprisonment, and that in some instances the legations are, in fact, almost completely isolated from adequate contacts with the people to whom they represent the United States. This is certainly the case in Albania. The continued indignities put upon our representatives in the Russian-controlled zones of eastern Europe call for the strongest countermeasures to show that we do not intend as a nation to permit an entirely one-sided disregard of the diplomatic comity that should be observed by the free nations.

If the "strictest reciprocity" was thought to be necessary then, surely there can be no question about it now.

Death In The Afternoon

It would be ungrateful, we suppose, to disparage the dramatic quality of any story that serves to compete with Mr. Vishinsky for the front pages and that enables us to forget for an hour or two each afternoon about the cost of living. So all that we shall say about the first two games of the current world series is that there has been nothing much about them to cause the hair to turn white from anxiety and pure excitement. In both cases the experience of the Brooklyn Dodgers has been pitiful rather than tragic.

At this stage of events, it seems fairly evident that the unhappy Dodgers are pretty thoroughly outmatched by Mr. Bucky Harris' young men, although serious students of such matters assure us that, judged by the standards of 20 or 30 years ago, neither club is much above the level of respectable mediocrity. Of course, some allowance must be made for the difficulties under which the Dodgers have labored in these first two games, such as the necessity of making a long and tedious journey by subway, and the unfamiliar playing field. Perhaps they will do better this afternoon in the more congenial atmosphere of Ebbets Field. But it is plain they must do a great deal better if it is to make any difference in the end result.

Thus the 1947 World Series is likely to be remembered chiefly for moral and sociological reasons—that is, as the first in which a Negro player has participated. This being so, it is gratifying to observe that up to now Mr. Jackie Robinson has been one of the two or three Dodgers who have not given the impression of having wandered into a World Series through some absent-minded mistake.

"Raedy Case"

In your editorial of September 29 you request on behalf of the community the resignation of Judge Ellen K. Raedy because of the accident in which her automobile was involved.

I would have been no more surprised had you advocated burning her at the stake, since it was The Washington Post which stated some time ago that Miss Raedy should be given the same privilege under the law as enjoyed by any other citizen. For reasons which it is her privilege to keep to herself if she desires, she elected to forfeit her bond, as many thousands of us do, regardless of guilt. The accident in which her car was involved has doubtless embarrassed Miss Raedy infinitely more than it would the average citizen. Therefore, not only has she met the requirements of existing law, but she has also paid a greater penalty than most of us would pay in similar circumstances.

The thought occurs that possibly Miss Raedy would have appeared at the trial had it not been for the probable embarrassment of someone else, or there are any number of personal reasons she may have had. In conclusion, Judge Raedy complied with the court. If you want a special set of laws set up for judges, then advocate that, but your demand for Judge Raedy's resignation was unfair.

As a general practitioner who has tried many cases before Judge Raedy, without a jury, and after many conferences in "chambers" with Judge Raedy, I am convinced that Judge Raedy is one of the most able, fair minded and industrious (hard working) judges upon the Municipal Court bench.

However, in view of the unfortunate circumstances and handling of the hit and run incident in which she is involved, it would appear that the only frank and forthright position for the judge to take is to submit her resignation at once to the President. Should he refuse it her reputation as a judicial officer will be vindicated. If he accepts her resignation, that can do no greater harm to her than has already been done in the circumstances.

How this judge can ever again pass upon the credibility of any witness or instruct a jury upon the question of credibility with any degree of control or judicial authority would stagger the most flighty imagination.

"Little Black Sambo"

Here again we are confronted with a controversy which amounts to a tempest in a teapot, the controversial issue as to whether we should or should not allow little folk in our school to read the story, Little Black Sambo.

I read the classic for the first time today, the version printed in The Washington Post of September 28, and I found it most delightful. After reading it myself, I read it to two small children of the impressionable age of six. And these children after listening with eager anticipation reacted in the most enthusiastic manner: the little girl cried out, "Oh, I love little Black Sambo." Then the boy asked, "Where is Little Sambo?" He then declared, "I want to know him, I want him to play with me."

These children felt that the tigers got what they deserved, and they were happy to know that Little Sambo won in the end. They asked to see pictures of Little Sambo, his parents, and the tigers.

In my opinion, the reactions of the children to this story were healthy, normal, and natural. They did not exhibit the slightest tinge of distortion of concept, nor did they reveal any feeling of superiority toward the little fellow.

Now from the point of view of the adult mind, one might read into this story a measure of symbolism. If one desires to think thusly, he could make the tigers symbolize the greed and selfishness of the white race in the effort to repress and mistreat all minorities. But I am sure the young mind would hardly detect this. The child sees and feels only the charm and beauty of this delightful story. And I do not believe that Helen Bannerman intended that we read into it any of the shortcomings of society. So I say let the little folk continue to read and enjoy this little classic.

Reciprocal Aid

I read a timely comment in an editorial section a day or so ago which propounds the very logical consideration that we might fatten Europe at great sacrifice to ourselves only to see it later swallowed by Russia.

It seems to me that there is but one practical and safe method of effecting a plan for recovery in Europe and, if the Russians will allow it, enduring peace. It involves material shipments to Europe on a reciprocal trade basis; that is, we furnish what Europe has not the capital, organization or skilled labor to produce, in return for raw material which we will undoubtedly consume in the aid-production process.

In this way, we will not weaken our future production potential, we will not go into as much inflationary debt and we will be extending Europe equally effective means of discouraging the stubborn weed of communism without exacting the price of European self-respect and pride.

Lee and Grant

Regardless of whether he drank or not (and it is believed that he took a mint julep now and then), I resent the statement in your Admiral Halsey bourbon story that "General Lee yielded to a tippler."

Robert Edward Lee, who has been pronounced one of the greatest military leaders of all time, did not yield to U. S. Grant, the tippler, for lack of courage or military genius. Lee's saga of battle against overwhelming manpower and production is told in the textbooks of military academies throughout the world but few, if any, laud the tactics of Grant's ill-planned, unmilitary flying-wedge attacks.

Three hundred fifty thousand Northern boys died in order that Grant could move 100 miles from Washington to Richmond and later become the most venal President this Nation ever endured.

Halsey is right about a spot of bourbon helping out after combat. For many years doctors have used good bourbon for such purposes. As a matter of fact, I have a spot of bourbon now and then myself but I never saw a soakhead yet who made either a good soldier or civilian.

Thanksgiving Gift

I suggest that as a Thanksgiving gesture the people of the United States give to the people of Europe food equivalent to the skipping of one meal. My idea is to propagandize the idea for some weeks, and then select one day for the skipping of the meal (the equivalent of some food suitable for shipping to be donated through the proper channels.)

Surely millions of pounds of food and good will from our people to the needy people of Europe would be a lovely Thanksgiving gift (aside from what our Government may in time be able to do). Back of this, I realize, would be the willingness on the part of the Government to see that facilities were furnished for the shipping. MRS. E. M. VACCARO.

Russia's Heritage of Despotism

Mr. Lippmann's "Cold War" articles have led me to offer the following:

Conscious of risking the accusation of warmonger, I submit that the invasion of eastern and central Europe 700 years ago by the Mongol hordes of the Great Khan has been resumed by the leaders of the Kremlin.

I further submit that any opinion predicated upon the assumption that any tyranny carries with it the germs of its own decay is dangerous, as tyrannies are the toughest political institutions of mankind and have been peculiar in their longevity. Socialism, Marxist or otherwise, has no objective basis for a discussion of Russian affairs, domestic or international. For what is the Russian state today but the result of the Mongol despotism set up in western Russia by the Mongol armies in the Thirteenth Century?

Those brilliant military tacticians were illiterate shepherds basically, and so long had they built their primitive culture around the bare function of herding cattle that the limited social institutions they developed were simply an application to human affairs of their long-familiar habit of shepherding.

For 700 years the peoples of Russia have lived in a system which the Mongols had built for them to the great but temporary profit of the khans, and when the Russian princes revolted and started the epic task of driving the Mongol back toward the East they retained the Mongol institutions. It must be remembered that many Russian princes had their power over the Russian peoples for the simple reason that they were mere puppets of the Mongol khans. See Harold Lamb, March of the Barbarian; Toynbee on nomadic peoples in A Study of History.

Through the post-Renaissance centuries all of western Europe struggled against despotism and tyranny and nearly all in the Atlantic community of states succeeded in greatly improving and humanizing the traditions and institutions of western Christian civilization. But not so the Russian peoples. Apparently for too long had they tolerated their shepherds; and today the Russian shepherds differ from their czarist predecessors only in their family antecedents.

The despotism of the czars is today a system of card indexes and modern statistical technology, with a gun for every card. How we can, with Mr. Frank Altschul, or Mr. X, wait for these sheep to revolt is to see this phenomenon through rose-colored glasses. I feel with Mr. Lippmann our only hope, repeat only, is to restabilize western Europe regardless of the inconvenience to the American dinner table and motor car industry. For the moral despotism of Russia which bears no resemblance politically to any western institution is a graver threat to western culture than the Nazis ever were.

Price Probe Road Shows

By Malvina Lindsay

People's Story

SOME MEMBERS of Congress are learning a lot about how America lives through the price investigating troupes now touring the country. Also they are learning personally more about inflation as on $6-a-day Government allowances, they must dig into their pockets to pay for $7 to $10 hotel rooms, and to buy coffee at 15 to 25 cents a cup.

American citizens in their turn are having a chance to meet a part of Congress in the flesh and to air their budget troubles. With three price investigating subcommittees on tour next week—one on the Eastern seaboard, one in the Midwest, and one in the Far West, the Nation should resound with public discussion of inflation—its ills and its panaceas.

Critics of these inquiries predict that talk is about all they will get. These "windjamming" sessions with witnesses all telling their troubles or passing the buck for price blame are a waste of time and money, say these critics. Also economists and financial experts look down their noses at what they consider crude and amateurish treatment of the complicated price problem.

PROBABLY the price investigations will do little to ferret out such economic mysteries as why the good old law of supply and demand didn't work as it was supposed to after price controls were lifted, why increased prices are not being matched in some fields with increased production, and to what extent prosperity by scarcity has upset competition and budgets.

But at least these touring price forums are extending the democratic process. They're taking Congress to the grass roots, and they are putting a national problem directly into the laps of citizens. People in the regions where the hearings are being held have less excuse for grouching as to why the President or Washington doesn't "do something." Washington is now at their doorstep and they can tell it what to do. They have the chance certainly to make a more constructive approach to the inflation peril than did their forerunners in 1921 who merely paraded in overalls.

The many housewives who have trooped before the Eastern committee with their stories have been getting some lessons in citizenship. After they have told their hard luck tales, exhibited their market baskets of inflated priced food, or otherwise dramatized their plight, they have been questioned keenly as to their knowledge of how goods are marketed and distributed, and asked just what they thought should be done about prices. Some have been confused and taken back by this. But an occasional one has come up with a definite program—even breaking it down into points. Many have asked for return of rationing.

ALL THESE housewives, even though frequently unable to tell the exact percentage of profit their meat and milk men were getting, or to recite figures on egg marketing costs, have yet impressively shown the investigators the arithmetic of feeding and clothing families on weekly earnings from $30 to $35 and less. All sorts of human problems, including the plight of the aged on small pensions, have been brought to the committees. One young woman plumped a baby on the committee table and informed the legislators her infant had never had a mouthful of Grade A milk because of the inflated cost of living.

Response of citizens to these hearings has been surprising considering that no sex, glamour, or big name witnesses figure in them. The Eastern committee reserves the first days of its hearings for consumers. Labor, business, church and consumer groups as well as individuals have their innings at these forums, where they may air their patriotism and price innocence, describe their plight, or tell what ought to be done.

All of this is helping to drive home to Congress and the Nation how this inflation that wasn't to happen is affecting American life. It is focusing public attention on the problem of what can be done now to save the economy from a further boom and resultant deeper bust. It is making many people realize that inflation is no longer something to be shrugged off as a byproduct of sun spots or an act of God. It may make a few more citizens grapple with the dull subject of economics as they recognize what a close connection their votes have with their pocketbooks.

German Black Market

Does Mr. Brady (letter published September 25) not know that it has been one of the foremost German grievances all along that the American and British authorities do not punish the black marketers adequately?

Does Mr. Brady not know that the German farmers have been hit by a terrible drought, that in many districts the potatoes are scarcely as big as boys' marbles, that the root crops have not come up, that the second hay harvest failed completely? To ask the death penalty for farmers who under such dire circumstances fail to declare the full amount of their grain crop is savage.

Who are really squandering the American taxpayers' money? They who prevent the Germans from helping themselves by fishing in the well stocked oceans and by producing sufficient consumer goods in their factories.

Travelers like Mr. Brady should be compelled to conform to the general German diet of 1550 calories a day. That would give them the desired "inside picture" of the situation.

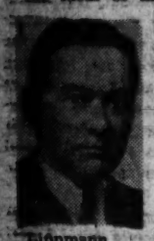
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Cold War XIV



Lippmann

AT THE ROOT of Mr. X's philosophy about Russian-American relations and underlying all the ideas of the Truman Doctrine there is a disbelief in the possibility of a settlement of the issues raised by this war. Having observed, I believe quite correctly, that we cannot expect "to enjoy political intimacy with the Soviet regime", and that we must "regard the Soviet Union as a rival, not a partner in the political arena", and that "there can be no appeal to common purposes", Mr. X. has reached the conclusion that all we can do is to "contain" Russia until Russia changes, ceases to be our rival, and becomes our partner.

The conclusion is, it seems to me, quite unwarranted. The history of diplomacy is the history of relations among rival powers, which did not enjoy political intimacy, and did not respond to appeals to common purposes. Nevertheless, there have been settlements. Some of them did not last very long. Some of them did. For a diplomat to think that rival and unfriendly powers cannot be brought to a settlement is to forget what diplomacy is about. There would be little for diplomats to do if the world consisted of partners, enjoying political intimacy, and responding to common appeals.

THE METHODS by which diplomacy deals with a world where there are rival powers is to organize a balance of power which deprives the rivals, however lacking in intimacy and however unresponsive to common appeals, of a good prospect of successful aggression. That is what a diplomat means by the settlement of a conflict among rival powers. He does not mean that they will cease to be rivals. He does not mean that they will all be converted to thinking and wanting the same things. He means that, whatever they think, whatever they want, whatever their ideological purposes, the balance of power is such that they cannot afford to commit aggression.

In our conflict with Russia a policy of settlement—as I have sought to show—would aim to redress the balance of power, which is abnormal and dangerous, because the Red Army has met the British and American armies in the heart of Europe. The division between East and West is at that military boundary line. The meeting of those armies caused the division. No state in eastern Europe can be independent of the Kremlin as long as the Red army is within it and all around it. No state in western Europe is independent while it is in effect in the rear of this military frontier. The presence of these non-European armies in the continent of Europe perpetuates the division of Europe. The Soviet government has been Communist for 30 years. For more than a hundred years all Russian governments have sought to expand over eastern Europe. But only since the Red army reached the Elbe River have the rulers of Russia been able to realize the ambitions of the Russian Empire and the ideological purposes of communism.

A GENUINE policy would, therefore, have as its paramount objective a settlement which brought about the evacuation of Europe. That is the settlement which will settle the issue which has arisen out of the war. The Communists will continue to be Communists. The Russians will continue to be Russians. But if the Red Army is in Russia, and not on the Elbe, the power of the Russian Communists and the power of the Russian imperialists to realize their ambitions will have been reduced decisively.

Until a settlement which results in withdrawal is reached, the Red Army at the center of Europe will control eastern Europe and will threaten western Europe. In these circumstances American power must be available, not to "contain" the Russians at scattered points, but to hold the whole Russian military machine in check, and to exert a mounting pressure in support of a diplomatic policy which has as its concrete objective a settlement that means withdrawal.

THEN WE shall know what we are trying to do. The Russians will know it. Europe will know it. We shall be trying to do a great thing which is simple and necessary: to settle the main actual consequences of this particular war, to put an end to the abnormal situation where Europe, one of the chief centers of civilization, though liberated from the Nazis, is still occupied by its non-European liberators.

We shall be addressing ourselves to an objective to which our own power is suited—be it in diplomacy or in war. We shall be seeking an end that all men can understand, and one which expresses faithfully our oldest and best tradition—to be the friend and the champion of nations seeking independence and an end to the rule of alien powers.

Three Choices In Greece

ATHENS, GREECE.—The present American program in Greece is no more than a stopgap one. The big question is: What will happen after June 30 of next year, which is the deadline fixed by Congress in appropriating 300 million dollars in aid for Greece.

Childs

We have three fairly well-defined choices. They are:

1. Quit Greece entirely, realizing what a tremendous undertaking any real rehabilitation of the country is bound to be. The result, in all likelihood, would be a full-scale civil war. If the weight of Moscow should be marshaled behind the Greek Communists, then the outcome would be a dictatorship of the left.

2. Make a commitment for 10 years based on a long-range plan for the gradual restoration of a normal, prosperous country. Naturally, conditions would be attached to such a commitment, the foremost being a reform of the tax system to force the rich to pay taxes. Various studies, such as the one completed a year ago by the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, show how irrigation, electric power and a tourist industry can be developed.

If such a commitment were made and the program carefully supervised, the sums made available would almost certainly decrease from year to year. Only through such a commitment is it likely that Greeks will begin to invest their money in Greece. Only by substantially raising the level of both industry and agriculture will it be possible to provide a livelihood for 7,500,000 people.

3. GRUDGINGLY make another appropriation for a second year. This would give Greece another boost, but it, too, would be a stopgap. It would not end the unrest and uncertainty that today make any real rehabilitation all but impossible.

The probability is for the last choice, which is at best a weak compromise between the other two. A second year of aid might end, temporarily at least, the Communist threat.

A great deal depends on the course that Russia follows. The evidence accumulates from day to day that the masters of the Kremlin may have decided the time is not ripe to force the issue. Not only in Greece but elsewhere the signs point to a decision to use legal tactics and to attempt to get back into governments from which Communists have been excluded.

The Soviets believe that we will grow weary of our expensive adventure in the Near East. They have demonstrated before that they can wait, and they will wait again.

In spite of the delays and the uncertainties in the American aid program, the position of the United States is strong in Greece today, according to observers with a long background of experience here. The incessant Communist propaganda about imperialism and dollar diplomacy has hardly scratched the surface.

FORCES OUT OF the past work strongly in our favor. One such force was the mass immigration of Greeks to America at the end of the last century and in the first years of this one. Many immigrants prospered. Before 1940 they sent back large remittances to families here at home. This was so substantial as to be a factor in keeping the Greek economy on a narrow balance.

Often they came back to confer benefactions on their countrymen and spread the golden legend of America's wealth. Such legends take a deep hold on the imagination.

Another force out of the past is the work of American educators and health specialists who have spent years and millions of dollars in wholly voluntary efforts to raise standards here and throughout the Near East. Through Athens College, which he founded in 1925, Homer Davis has exerted a profound influence in Greece. So has Laird Archer during his many years as head of the Near East Foundation.

One of the unhappy consequences of the Greek aid program was to make Americans think there was no longer any need of such voluntary undertakings. If, after what they have done, these institutions should be allowed to die, it would be a tragedy in more ways than one. They symbolize the vast reservoir of American good will in which the world has come to believe. And, equally important, every possible effort, voluntary and public, must be made in order to save a great and tragic people from decimation and destruction and the slow death of political dictatorship.

A Commentary On Confusion

THE SPECTACLE presented by the U. N. General Assembly when it had to fill the Security Council seats held during the past two years by Australia, Brazil and Poland was lamentable, to say the least.

NOVER

What happened reflects little credit on the participants individually and least of all on the great deliberative body which collectively is supposed to reflect the ideals and hopes and aspirations of mankind.

The only good thing to be said about the episode is that it proves the Security Council to be no moribund institution, regardless of its record of futility. Nobody scrambles for seats on a hearse.

THE ELECTION of Canada to the Council requires little comment.

It was a wholly deserved honor for our great neighbor to the north. Canada has abundantly demonstrated its devotion to international ideals. It made a truly magnificent contribution to the winning of the war against the Axis. Its delegations have been among the very ablest at international conferences, including the one at San Francisco that wrote the United Nations Charter.

WHAT CAN be said of Canada cannot be said of Argentina.

Argentina was a johnny-come-lately in the recent struggle against the Axis. Its government has laid violent hands on the press, the judiciary, civil rights. Its totalitarian leanings were clearly revealed when, despite the resolution approved by the first General Assembly, it sent an Ambassador to Franco Spain. It has used its great wheat surplus, so badly needed by a hungry world, to make huge profits.

WE ARE TOLD that the United States delegation supported Argentina's candidacy only reluctantly.

This country, it is said, would have preferred to see Cuba or Uruguay get the seat which Brazil now has.

We went along in the interests of hemisphere solidarity, since it was the wish of the great majority of Latin-American nations that Argentina be chosen for a place on the Council.

This circumstance reflects as little credit on our southern neighbors as it does on us. To have chosen this particular moment to do honor to the regime of President Peron makes no sense whatever.

THE RUSSIANS eased our own unhappy position on the Argentine candidacy by letting it be known that the USSR delegation was also voting for Argentina.

This was the result of a straight-out horse trade of a particularly cynical variety—Russian support for Argentina in return of Latin-American support of the candidacy of the Ukraine.

At this point, however, hemisphere solidarity vanished into thin air.

The United States was quite willing to live up to the spirit of the gentleman's agreement made at San Francisco that nonpermanent Council seats be allocated on a regional basis with one seat going to eastern Europe. Our candidate was Czechoslovakia.

The Ukraine, however, is not a sovereign state. It is part of the Soviet Union and its destinies are controlled by Moscow.

FROM THIS POINT of view the American opposition to the candidacy of the Ukraine made sense. But our case was considerably weakened by the circumstance that membership in the United Nations has not been limited to fully self-governing nations, in unquestioned command of their own fortunes and, in the words of the Charter, "able and willing" to carry out the obligations of that document.

Qualifications for membership in the U. N. are only vaguely set forth in the Charter. Proof of this is seen in the election of Pakistan and Yemen, the latest additions to the charmed circle of U. N. states.

Whether Pakistan is a nation in the real sense of the word and not merely a collection of people inhabiting a region designated as a nation, remains for the future to demonstrate. Yemen, technically, is more of a sovereign entity than is the Ukraine. But that is about all we can say for it.

With regard to the Ukraine the records will show that Stalin's proposal to admit that Soviet state and White Russia to membership in the U.N. was warmly supported by Churchill at Yalta.

Roosevelt reluctantly approved but only on condition that to match Soviet strength the United States be given three places in the Assembly. The fact that we did not press the bargain does not change the fact that the Ukraine and White Russia were admitted to membership, have participated in the Paris peace conference and have won election to U. N. bodies.

This does not change the fiction of their sovereign status into a fact. But it is, unfortunately, very late for the United States to insist that the fiction now be treated as a fiction. The time to do that was at Yalta. It is too late now.

29 N. Y. Childs Restaurants Closed by Noon-Hour Strike

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Childs Restaurants, hosts to some 50,000 daily patrons in Manhattan and Brooklyn, closed today just as the lunch-hour rush got under way because of a strike of 2300 kitchen, dining room and bar employes.

The walkout in the 29 restaurants was called by Local 42, Chain Service Restaurant Employes (AFL), immediately after company-union negotiators failed to reach an agreement in a last-minute session.

Kitchen help, the union said, was instructed to take all dishes off the fire and store perishables.

Principal union demands are a five-day, 40-hour week, and wage increases.

Cargo Handling Halted

Los Angeles, Oct. 1 (AP).—Cargo handling in Los Angeles and Long Beach harbors, where normally commerce estimated at 30 million dollars monthly is worked, was suspended today in what the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union termed a lockout, first under the Taft-Hartley law.

Charges of a lockout brought speedy denial from the Waterfront Employers' Association, representing 12 stevedoring firms which had joined in the case-work policy. An association spokesman said the employers regard themselves as being struck by foremen of the ILWU in their demands that the union be recognized as their bargaining agent. WEA has refused such recognition on the ground the foremen are part of management.

The employers ordered longshore crews this morning for four Luckenbach vessels—the Park Victory, Woodstock Victory, Mercer Victory and Clarksville Victory. The crews reported, but when they found the vessels under picket by the foremen, returned to their hiring hall.

Fifteen cargo ships were reported tied up in the two harbors and there was no indication of when they would sail. A dozen or more cleared for other ports yesterday in advance of the tie-up deadline.

Overseas Airlines To Furlough Workers

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—American Overseas Airlines today advised employes based or employed in New York that some workers would be furloughed as a result of a pilots' strike which has grounded the line's planes on both sides of the Atlantic.

The announcement, placed on bulletin boards, said the furloughs would be announced shortly.

The strike, called yesterday by the Air Line Pilots Association (AFL), involves 173 pilots and co-pilots, and indirectly has affected 323 other flight crew members.

David L. Behncke, president of the union, said in Chicago that "The American Overseas Airlines can end this strike any moment by signing an agreement already agreed to and settle their grievances with their pilots under the provisions of the existing agreement and in accordance with the provisions of the Railway Labor Act."

He said the pilots had indicated they would "remain out as long as necessary and are prepared to weather a long strike."

The union has contended the strike was not called because of a wage issue, but because the company allegedly failed to bargain in good faith, failed to send to conferences representatives with full bargaining authority, and had used the signing of an agreement as a weapon to take away from pilots the rights provided for handling grievances both in their contract and the Railway Labor Act.

The strike was termed "sudden and unexplained" by Harold R. Harris, general manager of the airline. He said all but a "few minor issues" covering rules and working conditions were settled in negotiations last week.

U. S. Agents Hunt For Hemline Plot

New York, Oct. 1 (INS).—Uncle Sam today plunged into the feminine hemline controversy.

Federal agents began an investigation into how the new long hemline style came to be decreed, and whether the "new look" is a sinister plot in restraint of something or other.

Acting on orders from Washington, antitrust operatives have called at the headquarters of the New York Dress Institute, where they examined certain files.

They also are questioning designing and manufacturing leaders to ascertain whether adoption of the new hemline was agreed upon behind closed doors in some manner that might be construed as antitrust law violation.

Hoover Recovers From Six Weeks' Shingles Attack

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Herbert Hover is "well on the way to recovery" after suffering for six weeks from shingles, a painful skin disorder of nervous origin, his secretary said today.

The former President had the illness when he addressed a Madison Square Garden meeting on behalf of German relief September 21. A doctor and a nurse accompanied him to the meeting.

Hoover returned from Washington yesterday, where he attended a meeting of a 12-man commission which will study how to simplify and promote economy in the Federal Government. He is chairman of the commission. He was at his desk today.

'Real Wages' Are Still High, CTC Insists

Capital Transit spokesmen asserted yesterday that 4000 AFL union workers, who are asking a 35 per cent wage increase, are receiving only 3 cents an hour less in "real wages" than in January, 1941.

The operators' top wages in January, 1941, was 79 cents an hour, according to the company; currently it's $1.20.

Arguing before a three-man arbitration board at the Raleigh Hotel, Hawley Simpson, labor counsel for the company, said that three cents an hour would restore the union employes to economic par for January, 1941. That date, he said, was the end of a six-year period of stability preceding the start of the war-boom price rise.

The union contends it is not enough to be restored to economic status of preboom days. Through its counsel, Eli Oliver, the union wants its "real wages" (pay related to cost of living) raised by 15 per cent in keeping with what the union argues has been the trend of all workers.

Electric Union Asks Ruling on Anti-Red Issue

The AFL International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers yesterday appealed to the National Labor Relations Board to decide whether all top CIO and AFL officers must swear that they are not Communists.

The union's action, in the form of an appeal from a decision of the NLRB's Baltimore office, brings up for a clear test case the controversial non-Communist affidavit provision of the Taft-Hartley Act.

IBEW Officials Sign

Under a ruling by NLRB general counsel Robert N. Denham, no union can avail itself of the law's protection or the NLRB's services until all union officers—including those at the highest level of the parent organization—have executed the oaths.

Officials of the IBEW, representing radio technicians of Station WARL in Arlington, have signed the affidavits, as have officers of the local union. But members of the AFL executive council have not.

Accordingly, the Baltimore NLRB office dismissed a petition of the WARL local for a collective bargaining election. The grounds were that the union has not complied with the law.

Appeal Filed Yesterday

The decision was made late Tuesday night. Yesterday, Lawson Wimberly, assistant to the IBEW president, appealed the regional office ruling to the NLRB. It will thus be called on to uphold or reject the opinion of its general counsel.

Wimberly indicated that he expected a decision some time this week, perhaps without a hearing, inasmuch as CIO and AFL attorneys have already argued the issue informally with the NLRB.

Both CIO and AFL hope for a ruling before their conventions meet this month.

U. S. Air Transport 'Sick,' Trippe Says

Pan American Airways Head Calls Restoration of Credit a Major Need

By James J. Strebig
Associated Press Reporter

Juan T. Trippe, president of Pan American Airways, yesterday declared the nations air transport "is sick" and that its credit "its lifeblood, is ebbing away."

Trippe told the President's Air Policy Commission the airlines and the Government must share the blame for general conditions. The Government, he asserted, has badly administered the Civil Aeronautics Act, which he called "a constructive and statesmanlike piece of legislation."

Trippe offered 13 specific suggestions and these broad proposals:

1. "A thoroughgoing review and reconstruction of routes and systems" both domestic and international.

2. Through exploration of Trippe's favorite project—establishment of a community company of airlines or one "chosen instrument" to operate under the American Flag to foreign lands, thus ending competition abroad between United States airlines.

The Pan American president said that in a period of general prosperity, the air transport industry's credit "must be restored."

Trippe said the Nation's air route pattern at home and abroad omits basic principles of transportation economics, but "the damage can still be repaired."

He offered as specific suggestions:

1. Domestic routes for Pan American if domestic carriers are to continue flying overseas.

2. Suspension of all routes on which service has not yet been started, and also on routes awarded without a finding of "public convenience and necessity," pending a general route pattern readjustment.

3. Refusal of permits to foreign-flag airlines which are not controlled by bona fide nationals of the foreign countries.

4. An investigation of whether the military air transport services are draining business from the commercial airlines.

5. Administration of mail provisions of the law to meet the carriers' requirements.

Would Repeal 15% Tax

6. Elimination of any needless steps before the Civil Aeronautics Board and speeding up proceedings.

7. Continued Government programs for development of military transports and power plants.

8. Elimination of red tape in international travel.

9. Repeal of the 15 per cent transportation tax, at least on foreign travel, and an increase in customs exemptions up to $500, but not in excess of $100 for each country visited. (Current limit is $100.)

10. Further Government development of airports and navigation facilities, and steps to see that some of the money provided for foreign reconstruction be used for such work.

11. Acceptance by the Government of the risk factor in collections in air mail payments from foreign countries.

12. Carriage of all international first class mail by air and provision for international air parcel post.

13. Higher salaries for CAB members and their staff.

Subsidy Suggested

Henry A. Berliner, Riverdale, Md., aircraft manufacturer, suggested that the Government subsidize the engineering departments of small plane builders.

Berliner is chairman of the Engineering and Research Corp., personal aircraft manufacturers.

He explained that it takes 50 engineers from one to two years to design a plane to meet Government regulations, while four engineers can design a bus for production in eight weeks.

Berliner, whose two-place Ercoupe has set a new standard in simplified flying, said Government estimates of 400,000 private planes by 1955 are "very high." It will take a great deal of effort to have even 100,000 in operation then, he added.

The principal thing the Government can do to help private flying, he said, is to expand ground aids, such as airports and navigation facilities, rather than try to develop the airplane itself.

Bolling Field To Note 30th Anniversary

Air Force units at Bolling Field will celebrate the 30th anniversary of the field's establishment with a retreat parade at 5 p. m. today.

Brig. Gen. B. M. Hovey, the commandant, will review the troops. Parties will be held in the evening at the Bolling Service Club and Officers' Mess.

Bolling was established as a military post in 1861 under the name of the Giesboro Depot, and was turned over to the aviation section of the Signal Corps for development of an "airplane field" on October 2, 1917.

It was renamed, after Col. Raynal C. Bolling, assistant chief of air service, who was killed in France in World War I.

Today the command units consist of the 1st, 35th, 3rd and 4th AAF Base Units, the 42nd Statistical Control Unit, the AAF Band, the AAF Bandsmen Training School and the 10th Photo Squadron. It is also national headquarters for the Civil Air Patrol.

Suffrage Hearings Now in Book Form

Rep. Auchincloss Advises D. C. Officials And Public to Study 600-Page Record

Representative James C. Auchincloss (R., N. J.) yesterday advised District officials and citizens to give "thoughtful attention" to a newly-published 621-page book.

Auchincloss is chairman of the House subcommittee on District reorganization and home rule. The book is the official record of his subcommittee's hearings last July.

Copies are available at the House District Committee Room, room 445 of the Old House Office Building.

Auchincloss said the official transcript gave a "very complete record" of the problems connected with reorganizing the District government and considering home rule.

Auchincloss said he hopes to have a meeting of his subcommittee this fall to complete a report on the reorganization and home rule question for the full House District Committee.

His plan is to have a bill ready for introduction early in January. Of the hearings, Auchincloss said:

"At a time when the United States is striving for the application of democracy throughout the world it is well to remember that it has not been completely achieved at home, particularly in the Nation's Capital. I commend these hearings to the thoughful attention of the officers and citizens of the District."

Prince Georges Gets New Road Regulations

Modernization of Prince Georges County's subdivision regulations and road maintenance program was ordered yesterday by the county commissioners.

The action followed a day-long conference with County Engineer Arthur W. Tayman at the courthouse in Upper Marlboro.

The commissioners authorized:

1. Requirement that streets and roads must have adequate storm water drainage before the county accepts them for maintenance.

2. Division of the county into four road districts with a general garage and repair shop near Largo to be headquarters for the entire road maintenance program. This action included authorization for necessary equipment to inaugurate the program under direction of the county engineer.

Ordinance to Be Drawn

Waldo Burnside, board attorney, and Engineer Tayman were directed to prepare an ordinance fixing standards and procedure for acceptance of roads, to apply to all sections of the county excepting incorporated towns and municipalities. Special taxing areas will be included and may have their streets taken over for maintenance if they meet the standards.

The first road district will be at Beltsville and will include Chillum, Berwyn, Vansville, Laurel and Bowie election districts, with 97.3 miles of roads and an area of approximately 97 square miles.

The second will be at the Large District, including Hyattsville, Riverdale, Bladensburg, Lanham, Seat Pleasant, Kent and Queen Anne election districts, with 96.92 miles of highway and 98 square miles area.

The third—Mellwood-Meadows District—will include Oxon Hill, Spauldings, Curratts, Mellwood and Marlboro election districts, with 106.37 miles of highway and nearly 125 square miles area.

Fourth District Outlined

The fourth district, at Brandywine, will handle Aquasco, Brandywine, Piscataway and Nottingham election districts, with 153.71 miles of highway and nearly 166 square miles area.

Special improvement districts have approximately 52.62 miles of highway which may be included in the road districts when certified by the county engineer as complying with requirements.

C. Henry McPherson of Aquasco was named maintenance superintendent of county roads at last week's commission meeting.

$200 in Rent Receipts Taken By Holdup Man at Apartments

Mrs. Jessie Dibble, 45, 4904 Jay st. ne., reported to police yesterday that she was held up at the point of a pistol and robbed of approximately $200 in rent receipts.

Mrs. Dibble said that at 10:15 a. m. she was seated at her desk in the office of the Suburban Gardens Apartments when a man asked for work. Told that the manager was not present, he pulled out a "long-barreled blue steel revolver" and asked for money, she said.

She offered him checks that had been paid her for rent, but these were refused. She then gave him some $10 and $20 bills she had in her hand and took the rest of the money from a cash box.

She said he searched the counter and file cabinet before elaving.

Oct. 10 Is Deadline For Taxi Inspection

1376 Operators Here Fail to Comply With Regulation During September

More than 1300 taxicab operators failed to have their cabs inspected during September, Traffic Director George E. Keneipp informed the Police Department yesterday.

They will be operating illegally if they don't complete inspections by October 10, he warned.

Keneipp said only 5660 of the 7036 taxis licensed to operate in the District were inspected during September, a month reserved each year since 1939 for cab inspection.

The expected last-minute rush by the 1376 "stragglers" will work a hardship "on other motorists who probably will be forced to wait in line for far more than the average waiting period," he said.

Azores Air Accord Reported Extended

Lisbon, Oct. 1 (AP).—Well-informed sources said today that the Portuguese government had agreed to extend until the end of 1947 the wartime agreement permitting the United States to use Lagens Airport in the Azores. Under the existing agreement, the period of American use would expire tomorrow.

8 Refugees Dock In Miami After 5000-Mile Sail

Miami, Fla., Oct. 1 (AP).—Eight Estonian refugees, including two babes in arms, docked in Miami early today after a two-months, 5000-mile sail in a 40-foot yacht from Sweden to escape what they described as "the iron heel of Russian domination."

Like the 47 Baltic political refugees who have landed here in 13 months, these, too, had no entry visas, and whether they would be able to remain in America was a question to be settled by the Immigration Service.

Five to Face Murder Charges At Fall Term of Court Here

A disbarred dawyer charged with shooting two men to death and wounding two others is one of five defendants slated for trial on murder charges at the fall term of District Court, which opened yesterday.

Among the 258 cases on the calendar are the perjury indictments against Henry M. Garsson, wartime munitions manufacturer and his Washington manager, Joseph F. Freeman.

Also scheduled for trial is the National Association of Real Estate Boards, indicted for alleged violation of Federal antitrust laws.

The former attorney facing a first-degree murder trial is Daniel Williams, 40, of Jackson, Miss. He is charged with the death, on May 16, of Policeman Pvt. Hubert W. Estes, 51, of 2713 N. Lorcom Lane, Arlington, Va., and Ray E. Devendorf, 65-year-old court clerk, of 201 2d st. ne. Two other men were wounded in the gunfire in Municipal Court Building at 6th and F sts., where the policeman was fatally shot while attempting to disarm Williams.

Affidavits that Williams is insane were filed in District Court September 18 following examination by two St. Elizabeths Hospital doctors. A further examination and possible lunacy hearing are still pending.

The fall term calendar, to which Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws and 11 associate justices have been assigned, also has a calendar of 3983 civil cases. The dockets are about normal, officials said.

Four criminal jury panels of 30 each will be selected Tuesday, as will a civil jury panel of 78. The October grand jury panel also will be named next week.

The bench assignments for the fall term follow:

Chief Justice Laws, motions; Associate Justices Edward M. Curran, David A. Pine and Richard B. Keech, criminal bench; Associate Justices F. Dickinson Letts, Alexander Holtzoff and Matthew McGuire, civil nonjury; Associate Justices James W. Morris, T. Alan Goldsborough, James M. Proctor and Jennings Bailey, civil jury. Proctor also will handle condemnations. Associate Justice Henry A. Schweinhaut is assigned to pretrial.

Conference Secrets Revealed!

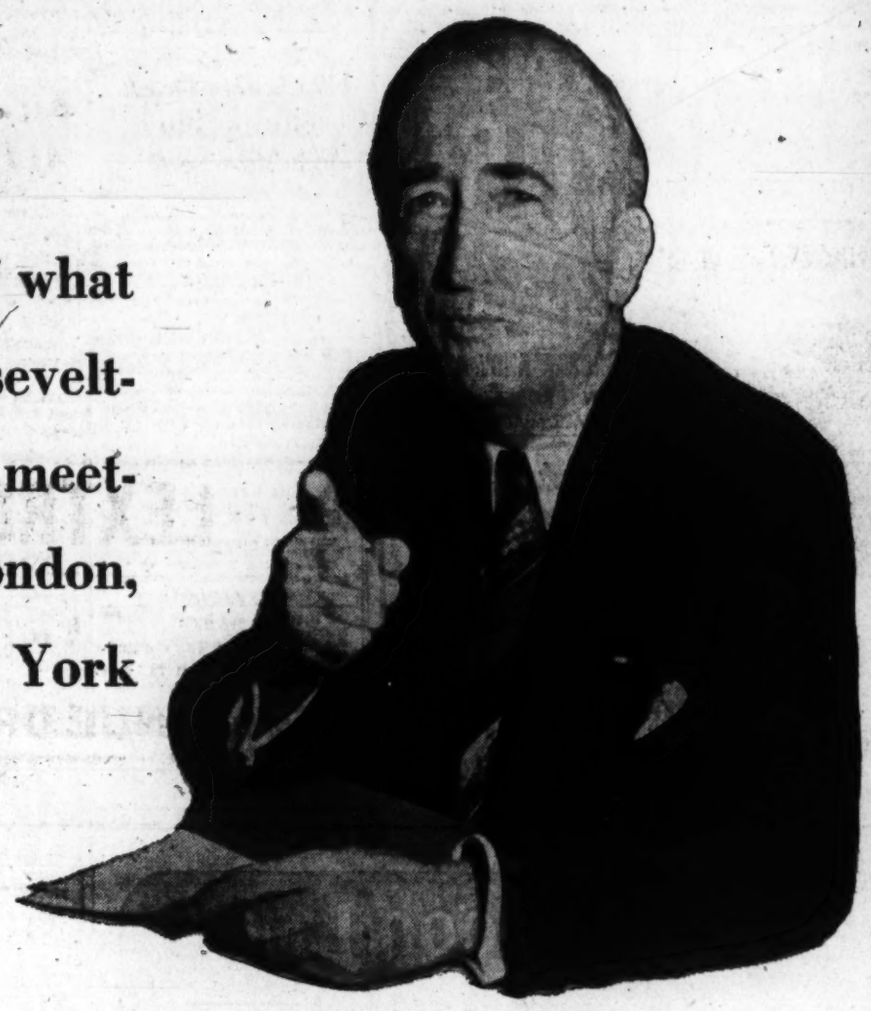
The INSIDE STORY of what took place at the Roosevelt-Stalin-Churchill Yalta meeting and the Potsdam, London, Moscow, Paris and New York conferences



By former Secretary of State

JAMES F. BYRNES

who took it down in shorthand!

The "Big Three" at Yalta. President Roosevelt took Mr. Byrnes, then Director of War Mobilization, with him to this conference

The Potsdam Conference marked the first meeting of President Truman with Stalin and Churchill. Mr. Byrnes was there and took notes

As U. S. Secretary of State, James F. Byrnes met Britain's Bevin and Russia's Molotov again at the Foreign Ministers' Moscow meeting

The Washington Post

Now you can learn the whole truth of what went on at the Yalta meetings between President Roosevelt, Marshal Stalin and Prime Minister Churchill, and the Truman-Attlee-Stalin talks at Potsdam. James F. Byrnes, "assistant president" and later Secretary of State, attended these meetings and took down the conversations in the shorthand he learned as a youthful court reporter. His story, "Speaking Frankly," answers such questions as these:

Is it true that Stalin brushed aside the Pope's views on peace by sneering, "How many divisions does he have?"

What did Churchill and Roosevelt say about Poland's new boundaries and the Soviet-sponsored Polish government?

What did Stalin and Churchill say to each other about the big-power veto in the proposed United Nations?

Why did Roosevelt consent to three United Nations votes for Russia through admission of White Russia and the Ukraine?

What secret agreements were made at Yalta? How did Russia get the Kurile Islands north of Japan?

Is it true that United States-Soviet relations became strained only after the death of President Roosevelt?

What government fell when Vishinsky slammed a door?

What Churchill charges did Stalin dismiss as "fairy tales"?

What happened to British foreign policy when Churchill and Eden were replaced by Attlee and Bevin?

After the death of President Roosevelt, Mr. Byrnes was asked to become Secretary of State. His articles tell frankly why his coming appointment was kept secret for months, why he refused to attend the San Francisco Conference, and what went on at the first Council of Foreign Ministers. Here is the complete story of the Wallace resignation from the Cabinet, including the actual teletype message to President Truman which Secretary Byrnes sent from Paris. Here is Mr. Byrnes' frank opinion of Stalin and Molotov, of Soviet aspirations and what we should do about them, of the Truman Doctrine and the Marshall Plan.

James F. Byrnes served in all three branches of our Government: as Representative and Senator, as Supreme Court Justice, and as Director of Economic Stabilization, Director of War Mobilization, and Secretary of State. His interpretation of the events he saw, the conversations he heard and the incidents in which he played a part makes tremendously interesting reading. You will want to read and clip every installment. There will be 20 in all, starting Wednesday, October 15, in The Washington Post. Newsstands may be sold out—be sure of your copies by subscribing. Greer Bogs in a Fog

But Film Makes Tyro Look Good

By Richard L. Coe

POOR GREER GARSON. Her own marriage a recent breakup, she's now on the Palace screen in a foggy, phony film, "Desire Me."

In making this presumably up-to-date version of the Enoch Arden story (wife thinks she's lost husband in the war but hasn't), Metro has attehpted to give the film a Continental flavor. Most of the setting is the French Channel coast and there's a strong accent on atmosphere.

This consists of much fog, frequently an effective device of French films, and careful attention to the pronunciation of "Monsieur" and "Madame." Since some of the characters are from Brittany and some from Montmartre, this permits inventive accents on the part of Miss Garson, Richard Hart, Robert Mitchum, George Zucco and Morris Ankrum.

Told through several flashbacks, the story relates how Miss Garson, a Parisienne, had made an unlikely success of marriage with a Breton fisherman before the war. Her husband, played by Mitchum, is an early prisoner of the Germans and spends five years in a POW camp.

Here he has met a sharp countryman whose previous life as a sly dog of Montparnesse has yielded nothing more concrete than memories. Richard Hart, a screen newcomer, plays this fellow, and from Mitchum's recollections of his wife and fishing village Hart decides that Mitchum's is the life for him. When the two escape from the camp, it looks as if Mitchum is killed.

Too Many Cooks?

But Hart knows better and so do you. He manages to win his way into the reluctant lady's heart (for she has been impressively faithful through the years) and keeps from her his knowledge that her husband still lives. He's just about to marry her and take her off to Paris when you know what happens.

This leads to rather a taut scene of the two men fighting it out on the fog-chocked cliffs, but it comes too late in the film. By then the pace has slowed to a crawl.

Precisely why the film is as lifeless as it is seems to lie with the number of persons involved in its production. Leonhard Frank wrote the original novel, which Casey Robinson adapted and Marguerite Roberts and Zoe Akins turned into a scren play. Most of it was directed by George Cukor, but he was replaced before shooting was over by Mervyn Le Roy.

As a charming player who has so often managed to conjure your sympathy with her unshed tears, Miss Garson labors over this part but it is merely a surface exercise Hart looks like a promising actor, especially in company with Mitchum, whose stock in trade seems to be petulant disdain.

THE PALACE does boast, however, a splendid short subject in "The Forgotten Islands," a special edition of News of the Day. This pictures the contrasts of wartime newsreels and 1947 shots of Guam, Saipan, Okinawa, Tarawa and Iwo Jima. While the contrasts are dramatic, the battle pictures are something that should be required diet for former Governor Earle, who recently prescribed we drop a bomb on Russia.

ALTHOUGH the Little's "Mayerling" is more than 10 years old, only recently has recognition come to its score . . . Arthur Honegger composed this and you'll recall some fine passages as the archduke and his unfortunate love hurtle through the night in a carriage . . . It was one of the features of the Boston Symphony's program, "Music in the Movies" . . . This is the eighth run for the Charles Boyer-Danielle Darrieux costarrer at the Little.

The Washington Merry-Go-Around

Chuck Luckman at 38 Gets Tough Food Job

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note—Drew Pearson today awards the brass ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, to Charles Luckman, head of the new food committee.)

Last week two members of Mr. Truman's Cabinet argued over who was to head up the all-important food committee, which is to work out a plan for rationing the American public and then make the public like it.

Luckman

Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman argued for Wisconsin's former Senator Bob La Follette, a thoroughly trusted, experienced public servant. Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, on the other hand, argued for meteoric young Charles Luckman, whom the venerable Lever Brothers Soap Co. of England picked to head its far-flung properties (Pepsodent, Rinso, Lux, Lifeboy, Spry) in the United States.

Anderson won out. Chuck Luckman, aged 38, one of the miracle men of American business, was made chairman of the food committee.

The Secretary of Agriculture had come to know Luckman at the close of the war when the soap companies, the American housewives, and the United States Government all were worried over the scarcity of fats. At that time Luckman visited Anderson, offered to make a survey of the world fat situation. The survey probably cost Luckman $5000, but he didn't even keep a copy for himself.

"It helped us beat the fat shortage," Anderson says. "For, as a result, we were able to encourage rapeseed in Europe, nut oils in England, and so on. It was one of the best jobs I've ever seen."

New Soap Emperor

Not many people had heard of Chuck Luckman until about a year ago, when suddenly Lord Leverhulme, inheritor of the vast Lever soap empire, called him to London. And at a meeting of Lever directors, Luckman was told he had been selected to head Lever's immensely profitable properties in the United States.

"But you don't know me," countered the 37-year-old Luckman.

"We know all about you," replied Chairman Geoffrey Heyworth, thumbing through a thick report on every phase of Luckman's life.

In that report was the story of a Kansas City boy who began life selling newspapers, jerking sodas, delivering groceries, and after working his way through the University of Illinois, finally selling soap for Colgate's. In fact, Luckman has been selling one thing or another all his life, and eventually made such a showing for Colgate that he was snapped up by Pepsodent Co. Pepsodent's profits rose from $600,000 to three million dollars.

Later, Lever Brothers bought up Pepsodent. It has been said in the soap trade that Lever bought Pepsodent solely to get the services of Chuck Luckman. (His salary is $300,000 a year.)

Only instruction Lever directors gave Luckman when he took over his new job was to "operate as he thought best."

One of the first things he did was to turn the soap world topsy-turvy by insisting the Association of American Soap and Glycerine Producers be headed by a "small soaper."

For years there had been rivalry and bitterness between the three big soap companies of the USA (Lever Brothers, Procter & Gamble and Colgate's) on one hand, and about 400 small soap companies on the other. Always the big three had rotated as head of the soap association—much to the resentment of the "small soapers."

Great was the astonishment, therefore, when Luckman, new head of the largest soap company in the USA, announced that though it was his turn to be president of the soap association he would step aside in favor of a little soaper.

Peace now reigns between the big soapers and the little soapers.

Exit Soap Operas

Another revolutionary move made by Luckman was to drop soap operas. These radio dramas heard over the air while the housewife washes her dishes have been the bulwark of soap advertising for years. But Luckman dropped them.

"I don't think murder, divorce and sex is good for the public," he explained, "and what isn't good for the public isn't good for my business."

Instead he concentrated on Bob Hope's humor, more newspaper advertising and on a clean-government radio drama called "Fighting Senator."

Luckman's latest sensation has been in the field of labor relations.

"When I think of the millions spent by business on psychoanalyzing the tastes and preferences of customers," he told the startled business world, "I am appalled at the picayune appropriations for research into the thinking, desires and hopes of the people on our payrolls. If we were to devote to basic industrial relations research just 10 per cent of the amount we appropriate annually for consumer research, we would not be such puzzled inhabitants of this cockeyed world."

Luckman recently signed a contract with the Chemical Workers Union (AFL) which H. A. Bradley, its head, called "one of the best examples of good collective bargaining in the United States."

"If we had more mutual understanding of this sort," Bradley said, "the so-called labor problem wouldn't exist."

Luckman, however, is not one to kowtow to labor. In fact, he leveled some caustic barbs directly at labor union chiefs in the place where it hurts most. After considerable research, Luckman discovered that out of 600 labor newspapers in the USA only seven had bargaining contracts with their own employes.

"It is doubtful whether as many as 20,000 of the 110,000 people who work for the unions are protected by collective bargaining and enjoy the benefits which organized labor demands that we establish for our employes," announced the man labor praised so enthusiastically.

That is the young businessman picked to head one of the most difficult and thankless of committees, which decides how much the American people should eat and then sells them on the idea of staying within the limit prescribed.

Severn School Pupil's Death Investigated

Anne Arundel County (Md.) authorities last night were investigating the death of George E. Kindell, 17-year-old Severn School student, who was found dead yesterday beside the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks near Annapolis.

Son of Capt. N. M. Kindell, who is attached to the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics here, the youth apparently was struck by a train County Medical Examiner John M Claffy said. Claffy said further investigation, however, would be necessary before a verdict could be given.

Young Kindell's body was discovered yesterday morning by John Bryant, a motorman, about 300 yards south of the Severn Park station and only a short distance from the Severn School campus. Dr. Claffq said he had suffered a severe skull fracture and his right foot was partially severed.

The youth had entered the school only a few days ago as a postgraduate student and was last seen about 6:30 p. m. Tuesday, when he attended football practice. The boy was quoted as saying he felt stiff after football practice and wanted to take a walk.

Dr. Claffy estimated he was struck "some time between 6:30 p. m. and 2 a. m.," but said it would be difficult to determine the exact time because he had lost so much blood. He said he intended to "do some checking."

A graduate of Oceana, Va., young Kindell had entered the Maryland school to prepare for entrance to Oberlin, Ohio, College. Besides Captain Kindell, he is survived by his mother, who is now living at Alanton, London Bridge, Va., and two brothers, William H. Kindell, 23, a former Navy flier, and John R. Kindell, 21.

Bogus Physician Linked to Case Of Missing Girl

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—School authorities checked up today and found that "at least 30" teen-age high school girls have been on the calling list of a bogus school doctor who asked them to submit to "physical examinations."

Extra precautions were taken to protect students throughout the city as police tried to find an answer to the strange disappearance last Thursday of 18-year-old Ramona Simon, Western High School senior.

Ramona's father, Jacob Simon, feared for her safety. He told police he couldn't believe she had vanished of her own will. He said she had once talked of quitting school to become a New York model, but had discarded the idea when her parents objected.

Police thought there might be a link between her disappearance and the mysterious "doctor" who has been telephoning girl students in various sections of the city.

Children's Nurse Chief Resigns

A one-time clerk who became a nurse because she "preferred people to things" yesterday left her 13-year post as superintendent of nurses at Children's Hospital.

Taylor

Miss Ashby Taylor, nurse for 21 years at Children's Hospital and superintendent of nursing there since 1934, yesterday was enjoying "a little leave" at her Fairfax, Va., home.

She will remain active in the District Graduate Nurses' Association, of which she is president.

"I've thoroughly enjoyed working at Children's," Miss Taylor said. "The time has been so loaded with events . . ."

Miss Taylor, a native of Abingdon, Va., taught for a year following graduation from college. After that she was five years a State Department clerk here.

Her nursing career at Johns Hopkins. After a year of private nursing she came to Children's Hospital in 1926 as assistant director of nurses.

"The worst thing about leaving was saying goodbye to the "children," Miss Taylor said.

Murder Hearing Held in Bedroom Of Invalid Woman

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—The dimly lit bedroom of a 300-pound invalid woman yesterday served as a courtroom for a hearing of murder charges against two men.

As the d ndants, Ernest Clark, 27, and Ernest De Berry stood handcuffed together, 77-year-old Mrs. Estelle Reed told Criminal Court Judge Joseph Sherbow what she saw and heard on the morning of June 8, when S. Winslow Sterling was found stabbed to death behind her home.

More than a dozen court attaches and policemen also jammed the small chamber while the woman testified that on the night of the stabbing she heard voices and scuffling below her window.

Fair's 2d Day Draws 10,000 At Frederick

Frederick, Md., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—More than 10,000 persons, including Governor William Preston Lane, thronged the midway and grandstand here today for the second day of the eighty-fifth annual Frederick Fair, as judging in all classes was completed.

Farm leaders agreed the current fair is outstanding as an agriculture exhibition. Most departments are above average, they said, and only the absence of farm machinery displays detracts from the agriculture fair.

The 4-H Club dairy cattle and swine entries were described as the best ever here and the dairy cattle classes attracted the largest number and best quality animals in recent years. All four major breeds are well represented.

Swine Quality Improved

Not as many animals are entered in the swine open class as in some years past, but the pens are well filled and the quality of animals shows improvement. The beef cattle show is good but only Angus are entered. Few sheep are exhibited.

The largest exhibit of poultry in the history of the fair is being shown this year. Exhibitors from New York to Virginia are showing their prize fowls, with nearly 1000 birds on display.

Some 400 students and teachers of vocational agriculture in Maryland schools are expected to boom attendance Friday, when they come here for judging contests sponsored by the Future Farmers of America and the organization's annual banquet.

Several Judging Contests

Their activities will start at 9:30 a. m. There are judging contests on dairy cattle, beef cattle, swine and potatoes.

New officers will be elected at a business session in the Frederick High School auditorium in the afternoon and prizes will be awarded at the banquet. Between 25 and 30 members will be given the degree "Maryland Farmer." One will be selected "Star Maryland Farmer for 1947" and awarded $100.

I ntoday's judging, Elwood Taylor, Berwyn, Md., won the top award for his grand champion farm flock of five females and one male. Taylor's White Wyandottes scored 92 out of a possible 100 points.

One on the Aisle—

Greer Bogs in a Fog
But Film Makes Tyro Look Good

By Richard L. Coe

POOR GREER GARSON. Her own marriage a recent breakup, she's now on the Palace screen in a foggy, phony film, "Desire Me."

In making this presumably up-to-date version of the Enoch Arden story (wife thinks she's lost husband in the war but hasn't), Metro has attehpted to give the film a Continental flavor. Most of the setting is the French Channel coast and there's a strong accent on atmosphere.

This consists of much fog, frequently an effective device of French films, and careful attention to the pronunciation of "Monsieur" and "Madame." Since some of the characters are from Brittany and some from Montmartre, this permits inventive accents on the part of Miss Garson, Richard Hart, Robert Mitchum, George Zucco and Morris Ankrum.

Told through several flashbacks, the story relates how Miss Garson, a Parisienne, had made an unlikely success of marriage with a Breton fisherman before the war. Her husband, played by Mitchum, is an early prisoner of the Germans and spends five years in a POW camp.

Here he has met a sharp countryman whose previous life as a sly dog of Montparnesse has yielded nothing more concrete than memories. Richard Hart, a screen newcomer, plays this fellow, and from Mitchum's recollections of his wife and fishing village Hart decides that Mitchum's is the life for him. When the two escape from the camp, it looks as if Mitchum is killed.

Too Many Cooks?

But Hart knows better and so do you. He manages to win his way into the reluctant lady's heart (for she has been impressively faithful through the years) and keeps from her his knowledge that her husband still lives. He's just about to marry her and take her off to Paris when you know what happens.

This leads to rather a taut scene of the two men fighting it out on the fog-chocked cliffs, but it comes too late in the film. By then the pace has slowed to a crawl.

Precisely why the film is as lifeless as it is seems to lie with the number of persons involved in its production. Leonhard Frank wrote the original novel, which Casey Robinson adapted and Marguerite Roberts and Zoe Akins turned into a scren play. Most of it was directed by George Cukor, but he was replaced before shooting was over by Mervyn Le Roy.

As a charming player who has so often managed to conjure your sympathy with her unshed tears, Miss Garson labors over this part, but it is merely a surface exercise Hart looks like a promising actor, especially in company with Mitchum, whose stock in trade seems to be petulant disdain.

THE PALACE does boast, however, a splendid short subject in "The Forgotten Islands," a special edition of News of the Day. This pictures the contrasts of wartime newsreels and 1947 shots of Guam, Saipan, Okinawa, Tarawa and Iwo Jima. While the contrasts are dramatic, the battle pictures are something that should be required diet for former Governor Earle, who recently prescribed we drop a bomb on Russia.

ALTHOUGH the Little's "Mayerling" is more than 10 years old, only recently has recognition come to its score . . . Arthur Honegger composed this and you'll recall some fine passages as the archduke and his unfortunate love hurtle through the night in a carriage . . . It was one of the features of the Boston Symphony's program, "Music in the Movies" . . . This is the eighth run for the Charles Boyer-Danielle Darrieux costarrer at the Little.

"DESIRE ME." M-G-M release produced by Arthur Hornblow, jr., from a novel by Leonard Frank, adapted by Casey Robinson. Screenplay by Marguerite Roberts and Zoe Akins. Music by Herbert Stothart. Directed by George Cukor. At the Palace Theater.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Chuck Luckman at 38 Gets Tough Food Job

By Drew Pearson

(Editor's Note—Drew Pearson today awards the brass ring, good for one free ride on the Washington Merry-Go-Round, to Charles Luckman, head of the new food committee.)

Last week two members of Mr. Truman's Cabinet argued over who was to head up the all-important food committee, which is to work out a plan for rationing the American public and then make the public like it.

Luckman

Secretary of Commerce Averell Harriman argued for Wisconsin's former Senator Bob La Follette, a thoroughly trusted, experienced public servant. Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, on the other hand, argued for meteoric young Charles Luckman, whom the venerable Lever Brothers Soap Co. of England picked to head its far-flung properties (Pepsodent, Rinso, Lux, Lifeboy, Spry) in the United States.

Anderson won out. Chuck Luckman, aged 38, one of the miracle men of American business, was made chairman of the food committee.

The Secretary of Agriculture had come to know Luckman at the close of the war when the soap companies, the American housewives, and the United States Government all were worried over the scarcity of fats. At that time Luckman visited Anderson, offered to make a survey of the world fat situation. The survey probably cost Luckman $5000, but he didn't even keep a copy for himself.

"It helped us beat the fat shortage," Anderson says. "For, as a result, we were able to encourage rapeseed in Europe, nut oils in England, and so on. It was one of the best jobs I've ever seen."

New Soap Emperor

Not many people had heard of Chuck Luckman until about a year ago, when suddenly Lord Leverhulme, inheritor of the vast Lever soap empire, called him to London. And at a meeting of Lever directors, Luckman was told he had been selected to head Lever's immensely profitable properties in the United States.

"But you don't know me," countered the 37-year-old Luckman.

"We know all about you," replied Chairman Geoffrey Heyworth, thumbing through a thick report on every phase of Luckman's life.

In that report was the story of a Kansas City boy who began life selling newspapers, jerking sodas, delivering groceries, and after working his way through the University of Illinois, finally selling soap for Colgate's. In fact, Luckman has been selling one thing or another all his life, and eventually made such a showing for Colgate that he was snapped up by Pepsodent Co. Pepsodent's profits rose from $600,000 to three million dollars.

Later, Lever Brothers bought up Pepsodent. It has been said in the soap trade that Lever bought Pepsodent solely to get the services of Chuck Luckman. (His salary is $300,000 a year.)

Only instruction Lever directors gave Luckman when he took over his new job was to "operate as he thought best."

One of the first things he did was to turn the soap world topsy-turvy by insisting the Association of American Soap and Glycerine Producers be headed by a "small soaper."

For years there had been rivalry and bitterness between the three big soap companies of the USA (Lever Brothers, Procter & Gamble and Colgate's) on one hand, and about 400 small soap companies on the other. Always the big three had rotated as head of the soap association—much to the resentment of the "small soapers."

Great was the astonishment, therefore, when Luckman, new head of the largest soap company in the USA, announced that though it was his turn to be president of the soap association he would step aside in favor of a little soaper.

Peace now reigns between the big soapers and the little soapers.

Exit Soap Operas

Another revolutionary move made by Luckman was to drop soap operas. These radio dramas heard over the air while the housewife washes her dishes have been the bulwark of soap advertising for years. But Luckman dropped them.

"I don't think murder, divorce and sex is good for the public," he explained, "and what isn't good for the public isn't good for my business."

Instead he concentrated on Bob Hope's humor, more newspaper advertising and on a clean-government radio drama called "Fighting Senator."

Luckman's latest sensation has been in the field of labor relations.

"When I think of the millions spent by business on psychoanalyzing the tastes and preferences of customers," he told the startled business world, "I am appalled at the picayune appropriations for research into the thinking, desires and hopes of the people on our payrolls. If we were to devote to basic industrial relations research just 10 per cent of the amount we appropriate annually for consumer research, we would not be such puzzled inhabitants of this cockeyed world."

Luckman recently signed a contract with the Chemical Workers Union (AFL) which H. A. Bradley, its head, called "one of the best examples of good collective bargaining in the United States."

"If we had more mutual understanding of this sort," Bradley said, "the so-called labor problem wouldn't exist."

Luckman, however, is not one to kowtow to labor. In fact, he leveled some caustic barbs directly at labor union chiefs in the place where it hurts most. After considerable research, Luckman discovered that out of 600 labor newspapers in the USA only seven had bargaining contracts with their own employes.

"It is doubtful whether as many as 20,000 of the 110,000 people who work for the unions are protected by collective bargaining and enjoy the benefits which organized labor demands that we establish for our employes," announced the man labor praised so enthusiastically.

That is the young businessman picked to head one of the most difficult and thankless of committees, which decides how much the American people should eat and then sells them on the idea of staying within the limit prescribed.

Severn School Pupil's Death Investigated

Anne Arundel County (Md.) authorities last night were investigating the death of George E. Kindell, 17-year-old Severn School student, who was found dead yesterday beside the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad tracks near Annapolis.

Son of Capt. N. M. Kindell, who is attached to the Navy's Bureau of Aeronautics here, the youth apparently was struck by a train County Medical Examiner John M. Claffy said. Claffy said further investigation, however, would be necessary before a verdict could be given.

Young Kindell's body was discovered yesterday morning by John Bryant, a motorman, about 300 yards south of the Severn Park station and only a short distance from the Severn School campus. Dr. Claffy said he had suffered a severe skull fracture and his right foot was partially severed.

The youth had entered the school only a few days ago as a postgraduate student and was last seen about 6:30 p. m. Tuesday, when he attended football practice. The boy was quoted as saying he felt stiff after football practice and wanted to take a walk.

Dr. Claffy estimated he was struck "some time between 6:30 p. m. and 2 a. m.," but said it would be difficult to determine the exact time because he had lost so much blood. He said he intended to "do some checking."

A graduate of Oceana, Va., young Kindell had entered the Maryland school to prepare for entrance to Oberlin, Ohio, College. Besides Captain Kindell, he is survived by his mother, who is now living at Alanton, London Bridge, Va., and two brothers, William H. Kindell, 23, a former Navy flier, and John R. Kindell, 21.

Bogus Physician Linked to Case Of Missing Girl

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (U.P.).—School authorities checked up today and found that "at least 30" teen-age high school girls have been on the calling list of a bogus school doctor who asked them to submit to "physical examinations."

Extra precautions were taken to protect students throughout the city as police tried to find an answer to the strange disappearance last Thursday of 18-year-old Ramona Simon, Western High School senior.

Ramona's father, Jacob Simon, feared for her safety. He told police he couldn't believe she had vanished of her own will. He said she had once talked of quitting school to become a New York model, but had discarded the idea when her parents objected.

Police thought there might be a link between her disappearance and the mysterious "doctor" who has been telephoning girl students in various sections of the city.

Children's Nurse Chief Resigns

A one-time clerk who became a nurse because she "preferred people to things" yesterday left her 13-year post as superintendent of nurses at Children's Hospital.

Taylor

Miss Ashby Taylor, nurse for 21 years at Children's Hospital and superintendent of nursing there since 1934, yesterday was enjoying "a little leave" at her Fairfax, Va., home.

She will remain active in the District Graduate Nurses' Association, of which she is president.

"I've thoroughly enjoyed working at Children's," Miss Taylor said. "The time has been so loaded with events . . ."

Miss Taylor, a native of Abingdon, Va., taught for a year following graduation from college. After that she was five years a State Department clerk here.

Her nursing career at Johns Hopkins. After a year of private nursing she came to Children's Hospital in 1926 as assistant director of nurses.

"The worst thing about leaving was saying goodbye to the "children," Miss Taylor said.

Murder Hearing Held in Bedroom Of Invalid Woman

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (A.P.).—The dimly lit bedroom of a 300-pound invalid woman yesterday served as a courtroom for a hearing of murder charges against two men.

As the d ndants, Ernest Clark, 27, and Ernest De Berry stood handcuffed together, 77-year-old Mrs. Estelle Reed told Criminal Court Judge Joseph Sherbow what she saw and heard on the morning of June 8, when S. Winslow Sterling was found stabbed to death behind her home.

More than a dozen court attaches and policemen also jammed the small chamber while the woman testified that on the night of the stabbing she heard voices and scuffling below her window.

Fair's 2d Day Draws 10,000 At Frederick

Frederick, Md., Oct. 1 (Spl.).—More than 10,000 persons, including Governor William Preston Lane, thronged the midway and grandstand here today for the second day of the eighty-fifth annual Frederick Fair, as judging in all classes was completed.

Farm leaders agreed the current fair is outstanding as an agriculture exhibition. Most departments are above average, they said, and only the absence of farm machinery displays detracts from the agriculture fair.

The 4-H Club dairy cattle and swine entries were described as the best ever here and the dairy cattle classes attracted the largest number and best quality animals in recent years. All four major breeds are well represented.

Swine Quality Improved

Not as many animals are entered in the swine open class as in some years past, but the pens are well filled and the quality of animals shows improvement. The beef cattle show is good but only Angus are entered. Few sheep are exhibited.

Eighty head of pedigreed percheron and Belgian horses competed in the judging this afternoon.

The largest exhibit of poultry in the history of the fair is being shown this year. Exhibitors from New York to Virginia are showing their prize fowls, with nearly 1000 birds on display.

Some 400 students and teachers of vocational agriculture in Maryland schools are expected to boom attendance Friday, when they come here for judging contests sponsored by the Future Farmers of America and the organization's annual banquet.

Several Judging Contests

Their activities will start at 9:30 a. m. There are judging contests on dairy cattle, beef cattle, swine and potatoes.

New officers will be elected at a business session in the Frederick High School auditorium in the afternoon and prizes will be awarded at the banquet. Between 25 and 30 members will be given the degree "Maryland Farmer." One will be selected "Star Maryland Farmer for 1947" and awarded $100.

Yanks Go Two Up, Humble Bums, 10-3

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

NEW YORK, Oct. 1.—By and large this has been a polite World Series thus far, with no loud hating from the dugouts of either the Dodgers or Yankees, but the customers within earshot of the Brooklyn bench are getting something of a private show.

POVICH

Charley Dressen, the Yankees' third base coach, is the target of the Brooklyn players. He's fully exposed in the coach's box, only a couple of dozen feet from the Dodgers' bench and they're delighting in letting him have it.

"Yoo-hoo, Charley, look at us, we're in the World Series," the Dodgers were telling him yesterday and today. "We got a new genius."

The sarcasm stems, of course, from Dressen's departure from the Dodgers to the Yankees this season. Dressen's sign-stealing and coaching strategy was supposed to be indispensable to the Dodgers.

"Hey, Charlie, we didn't need ya. Maybe you ain't no genius," the Dodgers are telling him. Dressen's beginning not to like it. Today he appealed to Third Base Umpire Bill McGowan, "How about making those guys shut up." McGowan decided there was no cause for his intervention probably on the theory that the Dodgers hadn't called him anything, yet.

BASEBALL COMMISSIONER A. B. Chandler will have to make a ruling within a week after the series ends, when the players get their series checks. The Dodgers put him on something of a spot when they voted on the distribution of their shares.

With a fine disregard for Chandler's suspension of Leo Durocher, the Dodgers voted their former manager a full series share that could amount to as much as $6000. The rub is that the commissioner has to approve the voting.

Chandler made it plain last April that Durocher wasn't acceptable to baseball, in the Chandler view, as manager of the Dodgers this year. There is some doubt that Chandler will permit Durocher to profit from the Dodgers' pennant victory. But Durocher visited Chandler in the commissioner's box yesterday and shook hands with him. It was nice timing, I'd say. Durocher didn't starve despite his unemployment this year. He got a $10,000 advance from Branch Rickey of his 1947 salary in February before Chandler cracked down.

THE SORRIEST FIGURE on the Yankees this series, until the fourth inning today, was Yogi Berra, their catcher. Berra not only was hitless in the first two games, but the Dodgers had stolen three bases against him in three attempts, and he didn't look very pert on Joe Page's low pitch that let a run score all the way from second base.

But in today's fourth inning, Berra rifled a perfect throw to second to catch Pee Wee Reese stealing and remind the Dodgers that their base-running picnic was over, perhaps.

One of Jackie Robinson's admirers had predicted, incidentally, that the Dodgers would run wild against Berra, saying, "Them Bums will steal his shirt if Berra hasn't got it tattooed on him."

BUCKY HARRIS, who has been a big league manager for most of the last 23 years and thinks he can appraise ball teams, wasn't reacting too smugly after his Yankees won the series opener. Realist Harris, who saw his athletes get only four hits in that contest, said "We won, but you couldn't say we looked very mighty."

In fact, Harris does not at all underrate the Dodgers in this series, nor does he class his Yankees as any world-beating team. "We got away with that first one on four hits, and it would be nice if our luck holds out," he said.

Something new has been added to World Series play. Six umpires are now on the field. The traditional two alternate umpires who used to sit around in uniform in the dugouts and hold themselves in readiness on the chance that one of the four working umpires might get hurt, no longer have that cinch.

They've been put to work. Now, instead of sitting in the dugouts, they operate from chairs at the outfield extremities of the foul lines where they call balls fair or foul in that territory. It's a rugged job, eh wot. And they get paid for it, as much as the umpire behind the plate. The men who drew the work are Jim Boyer of the American League and big George Magerkurth of the National.

IT WAS SEVEN YEARS between World Series for Buck Newsom, who will try to make it three in a row for the Yankees over the Dodgers tomorrow at Ebbets Field. When last seen in a series, Newsom was losing the seventh and deciding game to the Reds at Detroit in 1940, pitching with one day's rest, and only two days after his father died.

Newsom made a tour of seven other major league clubs before he landed with the Yankees and is the most traveled pitcher in baseball. He says he likes it with the Yankees. "Now I'm happy," he said. "Before, I was just map-happy."

Harris Calls On Bobo to Give Yanks Number 3

By Austin Bealmear

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—"Two down and two to go," was the Yankee battle cry as New York's American League champions flocked into their dressing room after flattening the Brooklyn Dodgers, 10-3, today to take a 2-0 lead in the World Series.

"You can't win if you don't get two," said Manager Bucky Harris, alternating his statement of yesterday when he pointe dout that "you can't win four if you don't get one."

The Yankees—who always act like Yankees even though their personnel changes from year to year—actually were less demonstrative today than yesterday.

They poured into their comfortable, richly appointed clubhouse, passed congratulations around among themselves and relaxed with obvious satisfaction, most of them looking somewhat like the cat that had devoured the canary.

Allie Reynolds, who went all the way for the winners in his first World Series mound appearance, was the center of attraction.

Teammates and outsiders crowded around the big Oklahoman, who admitted that he grew somewhat tired in the late innings but felt strong all through the game.

"Throw Mostly Fast Balls"

"I threw mostly fast balls," Reynolds disclosed. "It was a fast ball that Dixie Walker hit for a home run. It didn't have much on it—until after he got through with it. That ball must have torn out about three seats.

Harris, who announced that the veteran Bobo Newsom, acquired in mid-season, would be his starting pitcher tomorrow and said Rookie Larry Berra would do the catching again, although there was some feeling that the Yankee skipper might switch to another backstop.

Berra, only Yankee who failed to get a hit today, also was the victim of a couple of fielding lapses.

"He'll be all right," Harris insisted. "He'll get his hits before the series is over."

Berra, in explaining how Gene Hermanski's high pop fell to the ground in front of him in the seventh inning and then rolled foul, said Reynolds called for Billy Johnson to make the catch.

'I Got Out of Way'

"I got out of the way," Berra said. "When the ball dropped between us, there was nothing left to do but hope it rolled foul."

Tommy Henrich disclosed that it was a fast ball that he smashed for a homer off Lefty Vic Lombardi in the fifth inning.

"That was my third World Series home run," said Tommy. "I hit one off Charley Root in 1938 and another off Whit Wyatt in 1941."

Joe DiMaggio came to the defense of the Dodger outfielders who had trouble with the sun.

"That sun and the haze that hangs over the stadium makes it tough out there," he said. "I have a little trouble myself."

"I just hope I can keep it up," smiled Big Johnny Lindell, when someone suggested that the former pitcher, who landed a steady job in left field when Charley Keller got the misery, has been "wearing that ball out."

Newsom, unusually reticent, declined to make any predictions about tomorrow.

"I'm just going to pitch my regular game," said the big fellow who has won seven and lost five since coming from the Washington Senators.

"By the way, who's going for them—Hatten?"

The Yanks marched ahead to a 10-3 victory, their second straight in the '47 series, causing such a procession as is shown in the lower photo. Shotton Mad, Still Won't Name Pitcher

By Harold Claassen

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 1 (AP).— Burt Shotton, like a tolerant father, met his Dodgers at the door of the Brooklyn clubhouse as they dropped down singly and in pairs from the clouds to which they had blown during the second game of the 1947 world series.

"They beat us and we don't like it," he said icily to the bevy of reporters, whose pencils made virtually the only noise in the room.

"But we are human. We got a lot of bad breaks but most of them we set up ourselves."

Asked repeatedly which pitcher would draw the assignment tomorrow of trying to stop the New York Yankees in the series start at Brooklyn's home field, the manager countered with "I'll have one by noon tomorrow and the entire team will show up at the ball park. We are definitely not going to stay at home."

Shotton pointed out his club had lost more than two games during the season and "that we won the pennant with the guys we used today."

Speaking of Pete Reiser, star centerfielder who twice tumbled while chasing Yankee smashes that went for triples, Shotton said that "I don't think the fellow in centerfield was good, either."

Neither Reiser, nor other members of the National League champions, spoke as they changed into street clothes. Their attitude was best summed up by Hank Behrman, one of the relief pitchers Shotton used and who was dressed when the rest of the players came in.

"I ain't got no comment," Behrman tossed at reporters as he hurried out of the stadium.

Virtually all the players' attention was centered on the financial statements of the two games that was sandwiched on the bulletin board between a pair of telegrams from Leo Durocher, Brooklyn manager until suspended by Commissioner A. B. Chandler this spring.

Behrman's companion before the game was over was Vic Lombardi, the southpaw shorty who was shelled from the hill in the fifth. Listening to a broadcast of the game, Lombardi smiled wryly as the announcer told his listeners that a "pitcher with a big lead can win easier than one with a small lead."

"Man, isn't that the truth," he added sadly.

Yogi Almost Gets 'Brained'

Bums Sneak Back to Flatbush Disguised in Clean Shirts

By Bob Considine

International News Service Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 1 (INS).—The Dodgers crept stealthily across the Brooklyn Bridge tonight, disguised in clean shirts and, barring being purged by the enraged citizenry of that borough, made ready to play the Yanks on Brooklyn's home grounds tomorrow.

The Yanks will ride into Brooklyn in state, and none of them will be cockier than Louis Norman (Bobo) Newsom, that garrulous man-about-the-majors, who will pitch this third game of the series.

The sorely deflated Bums are expected to prop up Joe Hatten, a southpaw, in the hope of stopping the irresistible Yankee barrage. But Burt Shotton, who persists in trying to "surprise" the Yankees with his pitcher selections, may come back with Ralph Branca, whose hair was parted six ways by Yankee line drives in the first game.

It will be Bobo's first World Series since the final game of the 1940 series in which he almost won three victories for the Tigers against the Reds. Bobo's 1947 record was 11 and 11, seven of his triumphs coming to him after he left Washington for the greener pastures of the Yankee Stadium.

Hatten had a good record in the Navy, playing ball. But the odds are at least 1 to 4 tonight that he'll find civilian life with the Yankees hard indeed.

Interested in World Series records? Well, mitt me, kid . . . I'm coholder of one established yesterday. Seems that the sports writers on hand at the Stadium filed 266,000 words with Western Union, an all-time record for windiness.

Wonder what we would have sent if it had been a good ball game?

The Dodgers' Vic Lombardi left the premises early today. He was removed in the fifth at the insistence of his insurance company. The Yankees were hitting line drives back at him like an artillery barrage.

The first day's "gate" of $325,828.70 was greater than the total income of the first four World Series played. The first World Series, by the way, played between the Red Sox and Pirates, drew 100,429 fans and $50,000—which gives you some idea of how ticket prices have zoomed.

It might be appropriate to say that the Dodgers looked like sand-lotters in the Yankee end of the seventh, but I'm afraid the sand-lotters' union might have a good libel lawyer.

Reynolds Has Easy Time Behind 15-Hit Attack

By Shirley Povich

Post Reporter

Yankee Stadium, New York, N. Y., Oct. 1.—The Brooklyn Bums achieved complete bumhood today before 69,865 Yankee Stadium fans and are now threatened with the bum's rush out of this World Series.

The Yankees used everything but a seat-of-the-pants hold in cuffing the jittery, fumbling Brooklyn club into a 10-3 defeat for the second straight Yankee victory of the series. The only consolation for the Dodgers was that the game wasn't played in Brooklyn where the populace, too, might have poured in on 'em.

Allie Reynolds was the winning pitcher. It was a breeze for him. He had the combined support of 15 Yankee hits, including Tommy Henrich's home run, and the sorry antics of the Dodgers who were charged with only two errors but were guilty of shoddy, addle-pated baseball all day.

Dixie Hits a Homer

Only once in the ball game, when Dixie Walker's fourth-inning homer tied the score briefly at 2-2, did the Dodgers resemble a club that had won a pennant. Thereafter, the farther it went, the worse it was for Brooklyn—and the Yankees now have a 2-0 strangle hold on the series.

And with Manager Burt Shotton using up two starting pitchers, Vic Lombardi and Hal Gregg in today's debacle, the Dodgers are in desperate shape for a pitcher tomorrow when the series moves to Brooklyn. Either Rookie Harry Taylor or Southpaw Joe Hatten will get the call to start against Buck Newsom of the Yanks.

The Brooklyn miscreants today who were floundering about pathetically midway in the ball game were only warming up for their dismal performance in the seventh inning when the Yankees got their last four runs.

Everything Happens

In the seventh, it was World Series baseball at its worst. Outfielder Pete Reiser, already guilty of a previous misplay, let a hit skip through his legs for three bases. First Baseman Jackie Robinson mangled a bunt that went for a hit. A bit later, Robinson fielded Stirnweiss' grounder and was forced to hold it for inspection with Pitcher Rex Barney failing to cover the bag. The next thing Barney did was to wild pitch a run home, thus tying his predecessor, Hank Behrman for the series lead in wild pitches.

But even without the help of the Dodgers, the Yankees were doing all right. They changed the formula today after winning the series opener on only four hits. They bashed starting pitcher Vic Lombardi out of there in less than five innings and touched up Hal Gregg, Behrman and Barney with great fervor, too.

Along the way, the Yankees tied a World Series record with three triples—by Stirnweiss, Lindell and Johnson—in a single game. The only record set by the Dodgers was quite negative.

Shortstop Peewee Reese set a record for World Series shortstops by getting no fielding chances in the game. The Yankees obviously weren't much interested in hitting grounders to the shortstop when those fat pitches came plateward.

The opening inning was almost prophetic. Reynolds and his cute fast ball that was dipping inside,

Broadcast Lineup

The World Series will be broadcast locally today over WOL, 1260 on your diel at 1:15 p. m. by Mel Allen and Red Barber.

DuMont, on Channel 5, will handle the television, with Bill Slater and Bob Stanton at the microphone, also beginning at 1:15.

Odds on Yankees To Win Series Now Soar to 1-8

St. Louis, Oct. 1 (U.P.).—Betting Commissioner Jimmy Carroll, hiked the odds on a Yankee World Series victory to one to eight tonight, and made the American League champions a seven to 10 choice to win tomorrow's third game.

Carroll's odds quoted after today's game make the bettor lay $10 against $7 that the Yanks win tomorrow. If he wants to be on the Dodgers, he risks $5 to win $6.

It was pointed out that only one team has ever lost the World Series after winning the first two games, and that team is the New York Yankees—the club which today won the second game of the 1947 series after taking the first yesterday.

In 1921 when the Yankees first won an American League flag, they defeated the New York Giants in the two opening games, and then lost the series.

Grimm Agrees To 5-Year Pact

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Charley Grmim, manager of the Chicago Cubs, said tonight he had agreed to sign a five year contract with the Cubs.

Grimm said he came to terms with Cub General Manager James Gallagher here and then spoke over the telephone to Chicago Owner Philip K. Wrigley, who was in the Windy City to confirm the deal. The contract will be signed later, the manager added.

The terms were undisclosed but all involved seem happy over the continuation of the relations.

Grimm said it was the first time a Cub manager had been signed to more than a one-year contract.

"I am very happy about it," Grimm said. "I will try to be a good manager and I will continue to be Charley Grimm. I plan no changes. My coaches will be the same."

Walk to Shower Seems Million Miles

Vic Lombardi, Little Guy With Big Job, Pathetic Figure After Yanks Belt Him Out

By Whitney Martin

YANKEE STADIUM, New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—He was such a pathetic, forlorn little guy as he took that long walk from the mound to the dugout.

Not long in terms of yards or feet, but it must have seemed like a million miles to Vic Lombardi, with nearly 70,000 people watching his every step. And you felt a surge of sympathy and understanding as he marched resolutely, shoulders squared in a defiance which you knew must be a little synthetic and just a pose to hide heartbreak.

You somehow got the picture of a little boy teased and heckled by the big boys, holding back the tears and biting his lip bravely as he walked home trying to keep a measure of dignity at least until he was out of sight.

He's about as big as a toy whistle, is the Dodger pitcher with the soft brown eyes and innocent expression. Even as he warmed up before the second game of the World Series today he seemed a little out of place. A boy assigned to a man's job. Even the oversize blue cap with the long peak added to the impression that he had been handed the smallest uniform around but it still was yards too big.

Benign Burt Shotton let the little guy stay out there as long as he could, hoping that the breaks would start coming his way. But when Tommy Henrich led off the fifth with a home run which couldn't be blamed on two-bit fielding and Lindell got a gift double, the end was near.

DiMaggio, big, menacing and due, stood up there and when the first pitch to him was a ball, Shotton took abrupt action. The little guy with the oversized cap and the oversized job, today at any rate, stood there waiting for his relief, and then took that million-mile march through the long shadows of the vast stadium. His first big chance in his first big show had turned into failure. And the spontaneous burst of applause for the game mite was a testimonial born in a sudden rush of sympathy.

Briefly, the Bums did everything they shouldn't do, and did it quite thoroughly. They collapsed like a wet paper bag, and somehow we are glad little Vic wasn't around to be the victim. He had suffered enough, and also taught the Brooks a basic lesson, to wit:

Never start a southpaw against the Yankees.

Colleges Lower Grid Prices for School Kids

Washington high school students will see college football games in Griffith Stadium this fall at special low prices, according to announcements from Georgetown, George Washington and Maryland.

Georgetown opens its home season at Griffith Stadium Friday night when it meets Fordham. Student tickets for this game are available at the Georgetown Athletic Office and at the Christ Child Society, 608 Massachusetts ave. nw. Tickets which are available for all Hoya home games sell for 50 cents.

George Washington officials state that the Junior Colonial club will operate as in previous years. Under this set-up, students who purchase a Junior Colonial cap at Hechts Co. are entitled to buy tickets to G.W. games in Griffith Stadium for 25 cents. Caps cost 69 cents.

A reduced price policy will also be in effect at Griffith Stadium for the Maryland-North Carolina game. Maryland officials add, however, that such a policy is not practical for games played at College Park. The Terp bowl seats but 12,000 and there are 10,000 students at Maryland.

Colts Buy Guard From Yankees

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—The Baltimore Colts of the All-American Football Conference, in a line-strengthening maneuver announced the acquisition today of E. Grain, 230-pound guard, from the New York Kankees.

The Baltimore-bred lineman was drafted by the New York Yankees from last season's University of Pennsylvania team, of which Grain was captain. The Colts, who lost to the Yankees here last Sunday, took on the new lineman in a straight cash deal.

W. & L. Picks Captain

Lexington, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—Dyke Norman, 209-pound Washington and Lee center from Elm Grove, W. Va., has been named to captain the Generals when they take on West Virginia University's Mountaineers at Charleston Saturday.

Graziano Must Prove Innocence

Philadelphia, Oct. 1 (AP).—Middleweight champion Rocky Graziano will have to prove he never was dishonorably discharged from the Army if he wishes to fight in Pennsylvania.

Leon Rains, chairman of the Pennsylvania State Athletic Commission, said today the commission ruled three years ago that "anyone who received a dishonorable discharge from the armed forces of the United States would not be granted a license by the State of Pennsylvania."

"If Rocky Granziano was dishonorably discharged from the Armed Forces the above rule applies to him as well as anyone else," rains added.

The commission chairman said "Graziano will have to prove he wasn't dishonorably discharged or that the Army suspended the dishonorable discharge if he wants to fight in Pennsylvania."

Yanks Go Two Up, Humble Bums Behind Reynolds, 10-3

struck out Eddie Stanky and Jackie Robinson, the first two Brooklyn batters of the game. And in contrast the first two Yankees, Stirnweiss and Henrich rapped little Lombardi for hits.

The Yanks bounced into a quick 1-0 lead after singles by Stirnweiss and Henrich put men on first and third with none out. They didn't get it very impressively, Stirnweiss scoring while Lindell was hitting into a double play, but it counted.

When Reynolds issued one of the two walks he handed out, to Reese in the third inning, the Dodgers got that run back. Stirnweiss with a fancy stop of Stanky's single, cut the run off momentarily, Reese holding up at third, but Robinson got him home with a single to left.

Lindell Gets Triple

The Yankees then operated on a three-base hit basis to get back the lead at 2-1. Stirnweiss walloped a triple just out of the clutches of Reiser and Walker, and with one out, Lindell smacked a triple to center that scored him. Reiser went into a butterfly dance as he floundered back for the ball which, with better judgment, he could have caught.

The ancient Dixie Walker put the Dodgers back in the ball game in the fourth with his homer far into the right field bleachers that opened the inning and tied the score at 2-2, but the Yankees came back eagerly. Bill Johnson smacked a triple out of Reiser's reach and Phil Rizzuto scored him with a Texas League double to left.

In the fifth, the Yanks went townward with two more runs. The first was very simple. Henrich simply hit a long homer into the right center seats. A bit later Lindell doubled to left, driving Lombardi off the scene. Gregg came in and pitched a single to George McQuinn whose blow through the box scored Rizzuto.

Started Quietly

The first thing that happened in the seventh was McQuinn's single to right. Behrman promptly wild-pitched him to second. Bill Johnson hit a routine single to center to score McQuinn and Reiser made an un-routine fumble of the hop. The ball skittered to center field wall, and Johnson ended up on third.

Rizzuto popped up for the first out of the inning and Berra was intentionally walked to bring Reynolds up. Reynolds bashed a hard squeeze play bunt toward Robinson who bent down and came up empty handed.

The play was scored as a hit for Reynolds, moving Johnson home, and Barney in as a replacement for Behrman. Now Stirnweiss bounced a ball to Robinson and it was an easy out except for the fact that Barney didn't cover the bag, and Robinson had no play.

The next thing Barney did was to wild pitch Reynolds home from third with the fourth run of the inning. Dem Bubs were not much account today.

Rams Plot Air Game With Hoyas

Wake Forest Game Figures Are Studied

A weak Georgetown pass defense is raising hopes among Coach Ed Danowski's Fordham Rams for an upset victory over the Hoyas when the two clubs meet Friday night in Griffith Stadium.

Danowski has been carefully studying those Hoya-Wake Forest statistics which show how the highly favored Deacons barely managed to eke out a 6-0 triumph over the Hilltoppers. He's noted that strong Hoya forward wall and how the Deacons not only gained more than half their yardage on aerials, but scored the lone touchdown on a pass.

Meanwhile, Georgetown is polishing up its own pass defense which sputtered badly several times at crucial spots last week.

Delaware Worrying Tatum

Over at College Park, University of Maryland Coach Jim Tatum was trying to convince his charges that he is really worried over the coming game Friday night with the University of Delaware.

"Our scouts think, and remember they should be partial to us," "that Delaware is good enough to knock our ears off."

"No team that has won 32 straight games, whether against high school or small college competition, can be counted off as a push-over."

Tatum was given further cause to worry yesterday when it was learned that his No. 3 end, John Troha, will be out of action for three weeks with a separated shoulder. Sammy Behr, understudy to Lou Gambino, may see limited action because of an infected foot.

Otherwise, the Terps are in as good shape for Delaware as they were for South Carolina last week when they won, 19-13.

Skins Stress Passing Work

With the sign on the Redskin office reading "Only Three Days 'Til Opening Game" at home—against the Pittsburgh Steelers Sunday—Redskin training grounds at Brookland Stadium yesterday teamed with activity.

It was scrimmage time under Coach Turk Edwards, and pass defense and pass protection were being stressed.

The consensus of opinion was that the Redskins "did not excel" at either. It took 3¼ hours of scrimmage to renew this opinion.

Philadelphia observers were tipped off last week when the Eagles completed 12 out of 17 passes, good for 202 yards and 3 touchdowns in a 45-42 beating of the 'Skins. They also saw at least four Eagles pour through the line at Sammy Baugh on each of The Slinger's passing attempts.

In spite of the Steelers' unimpressive record—a 10-7 victory over Detroit and a 48-7 loss of Los Angeles—there was no belittling of Sunday's fot. Jock Sutherland-coached teams, it was explained, always have been "unsympathetic" toward the Redskins, witness last year's record of one tie and one Pittsburgh victory.

Dick Todd and Tom Farmer, inactive recently due to injuries, took part in drills and indicated they'll be able to play some, if not a whole game. Only player absent was John (Tree) Adams whose knee is getting a doctor's daily attention.

Butch in Balance . . .

Fordamites Gloat Over Job Of Swiping Hoya's Mascot

"If those Georgetown ninnies are wondering what happened to their mascot dok "Butch," they needen't worry any longer," said the voice at the other end of the phone last night.

"We've got him with us, and we're on our way back to New York."

The voice was that of Warren Gallagher, president of Fordham University's student council, calling from Philadelphia.

"Four of us have been in Washington since Monday," said Gallagher, "casing Georgetown, trying to figure a way to dognap Butch to avenge Georgetown's kidnaping of our mascot ram before last year's Fordham-Georgetown football game.

"WE'LL take good care of Butch, and if those little Georgetown kiddies are nice, we'll return Butch to them at halftime of Friday night's game in Washington. We have special ceremonies planned for the occasion."

Gallagher told the story of how he and the three others, George Neslie, Jordan McKay and Warren Smythe, all of New York City, and all former servicemen, had vowed revenge after Georgetown's theft last year of the Fordham ram.

Spending Monday and Tuesday nights at the Willard Hotel, the Fordhamites were occupied during the day trying to find out where was kept. It seems the Hoyas were anticipating the raid, and hid the dog in the infirmary with his keeper, Harry Rowne.

It wasn't 'til yesterday morning, when disguised as Georgetown students, the four invaders were tipped off by two unwitting Hoya freshmen, about the dog's whereabouts.

ALL DAY, the Fordhamites waited for Rowen to leave the dog for a moment. Finally, he did, and the boys entered the infirmary, took the gentle dog by the collar, bundled him into Gallagher's convertible, and headed for New York.

Gallagher said his party expected a hero's welcome at Fordham last night at midnight, and at the same time issued a warning to the Georgetowners:

"We've heard that some of you are planning another kidnapping of our ram. If so, change your minds. We have 75 students guarding it, who are looking for a nice big battle.

"Funny thing about Butch's collar," added Gallagher as an afterthought. "It says, 'Butch, please return to Georgetown if lost.' Haw, haw."

12,000 See Sea Snack Win Capital 'Cap at Laurel Opening

Air Patrol Is Second; $683,024 Bet

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Laurel, Md., Oct. 1.—Taking the lead in the opening furlong, the Christiana Stables' Sea Snack, skimmed along the inside rail to win the $10,000 added Capital Handicap here today.

An opening day crowd of 12,000 seeing the first Laurel racing under the banner of the Maryland Jockey Club, watched Sea Snack regain the form he lost in the Middle West this summer and lead the favorite, the Shamrock Stable's Air Patrol, into the imaginary wire. In third position in the field of seven came S. Greenfield's High Trend, a longshot.

Gonzalez Wins Three

Total money bet was $683,024.

Sea Snack's victory was the third of the day for Jockey M. N. Gonzalez, and the diminutive filly stepped the 6 furlongs in 1.11 2/3, only three fifths over the track record set many years ago by Star Porter. Backers of the daughter of Hard Tack and Miss Ferdinand collected at the rate of $11.60 for each $2 investment.

The Capital Handicap, first contested here when the famous Billy Kelly won in 1912, was the fourth big purse of the year won by Sea Snack in a dozen outings.

Eddie Blind, Maryland's new starter, sent the field away in excellent alignment. Air Patrol flashed to the front in the first few strides but Sea Snack from the inside post position began leading 50 yards from the gate. Air Patrol, Flying Weather and The Doge tried to get to the flying leader but it was no dice.

Air Patrol Makes Bid

Approaching the stretch, Gonzalez appeared to give the filly a breather. Air Patrol moved menacingly at this point, but in the final drive, Sea Snack stuck to her running guns and she was holding her advantage over the hard-driving Air Patrol at the end. High Trend was not an early factor but caught tired horses in the final stages.

A photo finish marked the running of the Quatre Bras, the $3500 secondary feature. The favorite players were much pleased when the picture showed Mrs. H. K. Hickey's Ocean Front the winner over H. L. Strauss' Pilater, half of the trainer F. A. Bonsal entry. Third money went to Mrs. J. Machise's Waterproof in the test of a mile and 70 yards. Ocean Front, the day's second winner for Jockey Don Padgett, returned a mere $3.80 mutuel and was clocked in 1:43 2/5.

Duke, N. C. Will Find Sledding Tougher Away From Home

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—Again this week there are a pair of major games involving Southern Conference teams but unlike the two top tilts of last Saturday, both will be played quite a distance from the confines of the conference.

North Carolina which was in its own backyard against Georgia last week takes a long trek to Austin, Tex., where they'll match Charley Justice against Texas' Bobby Layne. Duke, also at home last Saturday afternoon, will be in Knoxville to meet the Tennessee Vols in what may become a terrific struggle before the sun goes down.

Gamecocks Journey to Memphis

Duke and North Carolina aren't the only clubs with relatively long trips on hand before they go into action this week. South Carolina will move out to Memphis for a crack at Mississippi; Washington and Lee heads over the hills to Charleston, W. Va., to meet the Mountaineers from Morgantown, W. Va.; and the University of Richmond travels to Florida for a go with Rollins College.

The remainder of the clubs will be at least reasonably close to home on a slate that pits eight teams in interconference competition.

For those scraps within the family the Citadel will be at Williamsburg to meet William and Mary; Wake Forest takes on Clemson at Clemson, S. C.; North Carolina State and Davidson clash at Charlotte, N. C., and George Washington and Virginia Military Institute meet on the relatively neutral ground at Lynchurg.

On practice fields throughout the conference yesterday it was almost the same story at every camp. The scouting reports had been heard, the squads given light work on the first day of the week, and then gridders settled down to learning the offensive tricks of the teams they will face this week end.

Heavier Drills Planned

A majority of SC coaches plan heavier workouts for today and tomorrow with the usual tapering off to follow.

Duke gridders took a look at Tennessee plays yesterday and, according to the word from Durham, N. C., the Blue Devils have a long way to go before they are ready for the Vols. The Deacons of Wake Forest also got a glimpse of what was in store for them as they were given a prevue of the Clemson attack and reports of their progress in stopping their junior varsity indicated that the Deacons were in the same shape the Duke squad was.

Disregarding the Wake Forest report, Coach Frank Howard sent the Clemson Tigers through a long, rough scrimmage. Offensive maneuvers were the menu for North Carolina State as they worked under lights last night in preparation for the after-dark tilt with Davidson. Davidson got some of their preparation for that game in a rugged scrimmage designed to stop the Wolfpack running and passing.

The Tarheels had a lesson in Texas strategy handed them by the Jayvees, and South Carolina was busy working out a way to stop the Charlie Conerly to Barney Poole passing attack of Mississippi.

Trot Drivers Get Year Suspension at Foxboro

Foxboro, Mass., Oct. 1 (AP).—A year's suspension for both Howard Parker of White River Junction, Vt., and John Stanley of Somerset, Mass., light harness racing drivers, was announced today by Wayne Groves, presiding steward at the Bay State Raceway.

Each was accused of "conspiring to fraudulently affect the ultimate result of the sixth race on the night of September 27 at Foxboro.

Fans Get Mad And With Reason

Miami Beach, Fla., Oct. 1 (AP).—Baseball fans in the greater Miami area were hopping mad today when radio station WKAT, only outlet in the city broadcasting the World Series, was off the air for 28 minutes during the most exciting innings of the game.

Workmen repairing the venetion causeway drove a piling through a submarine cable, cutting off power in the vicinity, and causing the station to go off the air from the second until the sixth inning.

Telephone switchboards in the station and in newspaper offices were jammed with calls until the line was repaired and the broadcast resumed.

Race Body Clears 'Fever' Ruling

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—Judge James E. Dooley, president of the Thoroughbred Racing Associations, announced today that the organization's directors had recommended that only those horses known to be infected with swamp fever be barred from stabling or racing at member tracks of the TRA.

Civil Service Orders Rehiring Of 300 'Permanents'—or Else

By Jerry Kluttz

Civil Service yesterday ordered Federal agencies to hire some 300 laid-off administrative people with permanent status—or else fire 900 war service employes here in that field. The order becomes effective next Wednesday. These are the people to be placed:

Kluttz

Budget officers, information specialists, personnel officers, organization and methods examiners, position classifiers, and recruiting and placement specialists. All the jobs involved are in the CAF-7 through CAF-13 levels except information specialists, which range from CAF-5 through CAF-13.

Meantime, the commission reported that 30 firm placements had been made in its displaced accountant and auditor group, and about 130 tentative placements. There are about 300 career accountants and auditors to be placed.

The commission has had better luck in finding jobs for displaced statisticians and economists. Firm or tentative jobs have been found for more than 200 of the 300 who have been laid off.

The deadline for placing this group is Monday. After that, agencies that don't find jobs for their quota must fire three war service employes in those fields for each unplaced jobless career worker.

TREASURY: It has created an Office of Administrative Services to be headed by Paul McDonald, a long-time employe. The office will take over the functions of the chief clerk and other offices that are being abolished.

In the new office, Denzil A. Right will be superintendent of Treasury building, and Edward E. Berney will be chief of space control. The third division—office services—will be needed temporarily by McDonald.

Treasury is one of the last agencies to abolish the chief clerk job, which formerly was one of the most powerful in the Federal service.

CIVIL SERVICE has informed Federal agencies that hereafter its decisions on appeals from veterans are final and mandatory on them. It emphasized that the appeals cover reduction-in-force cases . . . Incidentally, Civil Service has ordered FEDERAL TRADE to rehire three of the eight Negro career employes it recently ordered fired. The other cases are being heard. The appeals are being pushed by CIO'S UPWA.

LEAVE: The congressional annual and sick leave investigation and how it's to be handled will be discussed at today's meeting of the Federal Personnel Council. The agency reports on the annual and sick leave records of their employes must be made to the Senate Appropriations and the House Civil Service Committees no later than November 1. The reports are to cover the first nine months of this year.

Congressional investigators say they will compare the leave records of Government employes with those of private employes as gathered by the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Also, they keep pointing out that few private employes have carry-over leave privileges, that they must take leave as it's earned or lose it. Many Federal officials are convinced the inquiry will lead to a reduction of annual and sick leave.

OVERSEAS: The Army has openings overseas for more than 4000 civilian employes. The bulk of the vacancies are in Korea, Japan, Okinawa, Guam, the Philippines and other Pacific areas. Several hundred of the jobs are in the occupied countries of Europe.

Top priority is given to typists, stenographers, and personnel technicians. Also needed is a wide variety of engineers such as electrical, railway, construction and sanitary. In addition, statisticians, agricultural specialists, public health and welfare people, and export and import specialists.

To go to Europe, a girl must be between the ages of 21 and 35. She can be up to 40 and be hired for an assignment in the Pacific. There is no strict age limit for male applicants. The War Department has about 148,000 civilians overseas, of whom 36,000 have been sent from this country.

POLICY: Former War Secretary Patterson told a New York audience the other day that the Army should continue to administer the occupied areas. He doubted if State could attract the civilians to do the job because, he said, partisan-minded congressional committees scare off capable civilians from accepting Federal jobs.

But it's reported that plans are in the mill for the Army soon to turn over administration of Germany to the State Department. Also, that plans have been dropped to civilianize the United States staffin Korea.

CHANGE: For about eight years I've had a week-end radio program. But now I've finally been able to get myself on a five-day work week. Tonight and each Thursday at 6:30 my Federal Diary of the Air will be heard over WRC instead of Saturdays.

Laughery Case Lawyer Pleads Self Defense

Princess Anne, Md., Oct. 1 (AP).—The State ended its case against Mrs. Laura Wilkins Laughery in the slaying of her divorced husband tonight, after asking a first degree murder verdict without capital punishment, and a defense attorney opened his case by telling the 11-man jury he would prove Mrs. Laughery shot in self-defense.

State Senator Thomas F. Johnson, counsel for the comely, 28-year-old brunette, said in his opening statement at the night session of the Somerset County Court that he would show Timothy W. Laughery had threatened Mrs. Laughery's life, had beaten her many times, and that she had shot him in self-defense.

The State's case was built around the wife's admissions at the time of the shooting that she had killed Laughery.

The defendant, is charged with pumping five slugs into Laughery when he came to her father's home on the outskirts of Pocomoke City July 18.

Mrs. Laughery and the 35-year-old chicken grower had been divorced six weeks, and she had won custody of their 7-year-old daughter, Judith Ann.

The woman and her father, J. Archie Wilkins, Eastern Shore hatchery operator and poultryman, several weeks earlier had sworn out warrants charging Laughery with breaking into the Wilkins home and beating them. They did not press charges after he was indicted.

Mrs. Laughery told officers on the day of the shooting she was frightened when her former husband came unannounced into the Wilkins home, and feared he might harm her.

Darden at Inaugural Warns On Peril of National Distrust

common tie which binds our people together . . . and unless we can achieve a spiritual unity capable of checking the distrust, suspicion and moral irresponsibility which poison the very springs of our existence, we have before us bleak and barren years."

But despite the gloom of the present situation, Darden's speech was on a generally hopeful note:

"If we are willing to devote enough of the resources of our people to improving their minds we shall be able to develop the competence to make the adjustments which changing conditions always require. Our political institutions need not be permanent, but our capacity to create them must be made secure if we are to succeed where past generations have failed . . ."

This university, as are other centers of learning, is confronted with the necessity of developing men and women capable of leadership in all fields and with contriving to lift the general level of the intelligence of our people.

"It may yet be our destiny," Darden concluded, "to solve the haunting and baffling enigma which has plagued mankind since the dawn of history—how to build a society which will endure."

For the first time since the university was founded in 1819, the inauguration of one president took place in the presence of another. The audience at the ceremony today included John Lloyd Newcomb, who retired in June after having served 16 years.

Until 1904, the University of Virginia had no president. Thomas Jefferson and other founders believed that the head of the faculty would be a more democratic officer than a president. In 1904, Edwin Anderson Alderman was elected the first president, after Woodrow Wilson had declined the post. Upon his death in 1931, Newcomb, administrative assistant to Alderman, was named to succeed him.

Yesterday's spectators included prominent educators and college presidents, from institutions all over the country. Well represented also was the Commonwealth of Virginia, with several members of the Virginia Assembly present, as well as United States Senator A. Willis Robertson.

In his address Sir Alfred Zimmern said that American ideas of government are gathering momentum abroad:

"As the windy ideals of Rousseau and Marx fade out of the picture, leaving material ruin and mental and spiritual confusion behind them, the idea of constutional liberty, which your founder enshrined in the Declaration of Independence, is steadily making its way throughout the world."

Declaring that the problem of European-American relations today is "rendered more difficult by the physical fatigue and nervous exhaustion which afflict the European peoples," Sir Alfred enjoined his listeners:

"Be patient with the peoples of Europe. Do not let yourselves be discouraged either by their apparent ingratitude or by symptoms of active irritation. When they wake up from their present nightmare they will realize that you are not seeking to dominate, but only to be wise and skillful doctors, aiding them to recover their health and happiness and above all, with the help of God, their faith in life."

Road Allocations In Va. Confirmed

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—The State Highway Commission today confirmed, with a few changes, allocations of 20 million dollars for 1948-49 primary highway projects which it had announced tentatively late in August.

Funds were allotted by districts on the basis of revenues estimated to be available for the year beginning July 1, 1948, each district's share being calculated on a percentage basis.

Among major changes in the tentative allocations were:

Route 43, Campbell County: A new $125,000 project was set up to eliminate a railroad grade crossing at Alta Vista, and $25,000 for improvement of Bedford ave. was eliminated.

Route 154, Prince George County: $50,000 was allocated for hard-surfacing an unimproved stretch of 154 north from Route 301.

Man in Boat With Friend's Body Rescued

A fisherman was rescued in the Potomac River at Morgantown, Md., Tuesday after drifting in a rowboat for several hours with the body of his dead fishing companion hitched to an oarlock.

Burns

The dead man, victim of accidental drowning, was identified as John E. Burns, 50, of 1509 Sharon dr., Silver Springs, Md.

Rescued in the drifting boat after he had tried in vain to save his friend was Guy C. Barron, of Lanham, Md. He was near collapse when the boat was reached.

Harvey Farrell, a Morgantown waterman, member of the rescue party, said he and a friend, R. E. Skinner, spied the rowboat about 5 p. m. Tuesday.

Body Hitched to Oarlock

They went out in a motorboat, and found Burns' body caught to the oarlock with his belt. Barron could scarcely talk, and his mouth was bleeding for shouting so long for help, Farrell said.

Barron told them that Burns fell overboard about 1 p. m. while casting for spot and perch.

It was about 10 minutes before he could start the outboard motor, Farrell said, and he drifted away from Burns. He was unable to reach his friend on the first try, and on the second the motor snapped a pin. Farrell finally paddled to Burns, who was floating but did not respond when he tried to resuscitate him. He then hooked Burns' belt over the oarlock and sat on the opposite side of the boat to balance it.

Dr. Thomas C. Higdon, deputy coroner, Wayside, Md., issued a certificate of death due to accidental drowning.

Plans to End Md. Sales Tax Outlined to Legislative Body

Baltimore, Oct. 1 (AP).—To the accompaniment of gavel-poundings and cries of "personalities," Attorney Hyman A. Pressman of Baltimore today laid before the Maryland legislative council a "fool-proof plan" to eliminate the State sales tax.

Pressman said his proposals, involving "no new taxes" but an "increase in existing taxes," would produce $18,253,827 annually and make the sales tax "totally unnecessary."

The new funds, he said, could be raised by increasing corporation income taxes and other levies and by re-calculating what he called the administration's "underestimated surplus" and "underestimated tax receipts."

Speech Interrupted

Senate President Joseph R. Byrnes (D., Balto. Fifth), interrupted Pressman's 70-minute speech twice with his gavel when Pressman dealt "in personalities."

When Pressman referred to a tendency "to underestimate tax revenues for the obvious purpose of creating a surplus for election years," Senators Paul G. Stromberg and William P. Bolton rose up with charges of "political attack" and "criticism of Governor Lane's administration."

Senator Robert B. Kimble (R., Allegany) later took the floor to champion Pressman, saying:

"A great segment of Maryland approves your courage in coming here to plead for the repeal of the obnoxious sales tax."

Want No Arguments

Stromberg replied that the council, at its meetings this year, had "listened to long-winded tirades almost to the point of exhaustion" and hoped that future speakers would "stick to the point and not argue if you please."

Byrnes said the council, composed of top-ranking State legislators acting as an interim committee of the Maryland General Assembly, would "give thought to your talk" after Pressman had outlined his program to "produce" the following funds:

$350,000—spent on sales tax, "administration costs."

$939,421—or one half the amount Lane was "too short' 'in preliminary estimates of the State surplus, compared with the "actual surplus" at the end of the last fiscal year.

$Two million dollars—or the increase over "underestimated tax receipts which is now expected in 1948 and 1949 because of higher insurance and income tax estimates.

$2,250,000,000—To be taken from the State Roads Commission, which is receiving "double revenue" from a new titling tax on motor vehicles, beyond regular appropriations.

$1,450,000—Paying State police appropriations out of "highway user revenue," where "actual revenue is far in excess of estimated revenue," instead of out of the general fund.

$7,634,070—Raise State income tax on corporations, "now the lowest in the Nation," from 1½ to 5 per cent "to fit the national pattern."

The total, Pressman said, comes to $18,253,827 a year. State Comptroller Jamese J .Lacy has estimated that the sales tax will bring in about $2,500,000 the first year.

Pressman said his "facts and figures" were otbained from "official Government reports."

Va. Reaffirms Ban On Anti-KKK Film

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—The Virginia Motion Picture Censorship Board today refused to rescind its ban of the film "Burning Cross" on the grounds that it would tend to revive "animosities, dislikes and enmities."

Following a second screening of the anti-Ku Klux Klan picture yesterday, th eboard issued a statement expressing the belief that the film would have a tendency to "incite prejudices and intense emotions, thereby reviving the controversies and disputes which the board believes presently to be quiet and not now occupying the public attention."

"The board believes," the statement continued, "that the general theme and design of the picture is of such inflammatory nature that its exhibition would be the motive for the revival of animosities, dislikes and enmities which may cause quarrels and breeches of the peace and consequently corrupt morals or incite crime."

Board Chairman J. B. Beverley, jr., said the decision to refuse a license for the film was unanimous.

The Virginia censors agreed to review the picture for the second time and reconsider its ban at the request of the Screen Guild, producers and distributors of the film.

Man Accused In Kidnaping Of Woman

George Paul Harding, 36, of 5210 Fisher rd., Temple Hill, Md., was arrested yesterday by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on a charge of kidnaping.

He is accused of taking Mrs. Lorraine McCormick, 29-year-old secretary of 24 8th st. ne., across the District line into Maryland.

Arraigned before United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage, Harding was granted a continuance until October 15 and released under $5000 bond.

On Monday, Harding faced Municipal Court on charges, filed by Metropolitan police of threats, assault and assault with a dangerous weapon on Mrs. McCormick, who is now in Providence Hospital recovering from injuries said to have been inflicted by Harding.

According to police, Harding sought to persuade Mrs. McCormick to get a divorce and marry him after he gets a divorce.

Police Tells of Events

According to the FBI and Lieut. Richard McCarty of the police sex squad, this was the sequence of events:

Harding, who has known Mrs. McCormick for about two years, flashed a gun to frighten off an escort, a 25-year-old college student, who was saying good night to the woman near her home about 3 a. m. Friday. Harding warned the youth to "stay away from my girl," police added.

Mrs. McCormick was forced at gunpoint into Harding's car, police, said, While driving out to Maryland, near Silver Hill, Harding slapped the woman and battered her on the forehead with his gun until she promised to marry him, police charged.

The alleged three-hour abduction ended when Harding delivered the woman to Providence Hospital at about 6 a. m. where she was admitted for cuts and bruises of the head, according to the police report.

Brought Her Flowers

Police said Harding later brought the woman flowers and candy. But at about 4 a. m. Saturday, police reported, Harding entered the hospital to assault Mrs. McCormick again, escaping before screams of the other person in the semiprivate room brought attendants.

Harding gave himself up at police headquarters Saturday and showed up at headquarters again yesterday when the FBI, which investigated with local police, moved into the case.

Harding listed his occupation as "clerk"; Mrs. McCormick has been employed nine years by the Schine Theater Circuit of 640 K st. nw.

Vepco Faces Legal Action In Fairfax

E. Russell White, Fairfax County zoning administrator, said yesterday he will take out a criminal warrant against Virginia Electric & Power Co. today or tomorrow for violating the county zoning ordinance.

White said he had learned from Commonwealth's Attorney Hugh B. Marsh that Vepco has started construction of its new 110,000-volt power line without the required use permit.

Marsh told the county board of supervisors yesterday that Vepco has violated the zoning ordinance by erecting nine pole structures on which the line would be strung. He advised the board then that it could (1) initiate a civil suit by seeking an injunction, or (2) let the zoning administrator take the matter into criminal court.

By taking no action, the board presumably agreed with the latter suggestion.

The board, at a bi-weekly meeting, received a petition from 720 Groveton citizens asking aid in abating the "hazards and nuisance" created by low-flying planes from the Beacon Hill Airport. The petition said a school adjoining the airfield would be imperiled in event of a crash.

The board denied a rezoning request for a roller skating rink on the Lee hgwy., west of Falls Church, on the grounds that there are already recreation facilities available and that the project would create a traffic hazard.

Action Must Replace Talk, Acheson Says

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, October 1.—Former Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson warned here today that action must replace debate in domestic and foreign affairs or the result may be "disastrous" to America.

At the opening of the 75th Anniversary Fund Campaign of Wellesley College, he said "the element of unlimited time has been denied us."

"If we go on interminably debating urgent domestic questions," Acheson said, "potponing action until consequences occur which weaken us, the effect upon our position in the woldr and our security is immediate and may be disastrous. If we do the same thing in dealing with foreign affairs, the explosion may be even quicker and more harmful."

"The backbone of a police state," he added, "is its secret police. The backbone of a democracy is the education of its people to know and support the truth."

"These coming years," he declared, "will not be easy for Americans. They will not be years where the basic problems can be settled by one great effort. They will require more steadiness, more plugging away, more cold analysis of invovled facts, more unemotional making of unpleasant decisions, than comes easily to us.

"We have got to apprehend, as deeply and continuously as an animal does, that we are faced by great and incessant danger. We cannot deal with it without constant thought, constant inconvenience, and constant effort. It will require a body of pretty hard-headed and competent citizens to see us safely and soundly through these coming years.

Freight Car Output Held Shot to Pieces

New York, Oct. 1 (AP).—The 10,000-car-a-month freight car program which was to have been a fact by October is "shot to pieces," The Iron Age, trade publication, said today.

Transportation, the survey added, is rapidly reaching a national crisis.

The magazine predicted that in the last three months this year, freight car output will fall short of the goal by 2000 to 3000 cars a month.

"While both railroad car builders and the steel industry present figures to indicate a blameless record for the freight car program failure," said the weekly. "The situation is going from bad to worse.

"Cars are being retired at a much faster rate than they are being replaced—a condition which has been going on since war days when some authorities refused to consider the freight car problem on a par with ammunition requirements."

The magazine called the impact of the Marshall Plan on steel officials and steel users "terrific." Present indications, said the survey, indicate the plan will call for annual shipments of two million tons each of scrap and "crude and semifinished steel."

Steel output this week is unchanged at 95 per cent of rated capacity, said the publication.

She began her film career in the old Hal Roach comedies, and in 1925 was named Wampas Baby star of the year. She shared star billings with the late Tom Mix and Lew Cody.

Faith Restored

Unknown Man Antes $1 for Brood of 50

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

VOLATILE Mrs. de Witt Ramsey has had her faith in humanity restored! Wife of the admiral who is Vice Chief of Naval operations, Juanita Ramsey heads a fund raising committee which will transplant 50 stateless children to the Caribbean island of Nevis. So many well-to-do friends ignored her appeal, she was thoroughly disgusted.

While she was working off steam in her garden the other day, a Negro walked up to the gate. Holding out a dollar bill he said politely "I understand you and the admiral is going to give birth of fifty children and needs money."

Flustered, Mrs. R. took the bill, collected her wits sufficiently to ask his name so she could make out a receipt. "Oh, you and the admiral is going to have your handsful with fifty children," he said, "you won't have no time for making receipes!"

And before Mrs. Ramsey could think of a word, the unknown benefactor ambled off.

Art Editor Returns

CARESSE CROSBY'S back in town after half a year spent in Athens, Rome, Dublin, Paris. The former Mrs. Harry Crosby, whose real name is Polly, is editor of the Continental Review and her job is keeping abreast of new trends in art. A year or more ago she went to Italy, returned with an amazing portfolio, photographs of work done by comparatively unknown postwar artists, of new work turned out by artists already well known.

This year she made up another portfolio in Greece. Though literally half starved, she found Greek artists extraordinarily creative, their work wonderfully vital. In between Greece and Ireland, where the Intercontinental Review has opened a branch, Caresse took over the Henry Cliffords' villa in Florence.

The Crosby Gallery which was first launched on G street, then moved to 20th st., has been closed for good. Instead, Caresse's keeping a sort of basement workroom in her new house next to the Colombian Embassy, where Pietro Lazzari is to be in charge of the various portfolios, the etchings and paintings brought back from Europe.

Caresse is an old hand at launching artists and writers. Back in prewar Paris she and Harry ran the Black Sun Press which first published the works of such individual writers as James Joyce and D. H. Lawrence. A great friend of Salvador Dali, she brought him to this country, launched the Spanish painter on his exotic, surrealist career.

Later she plugged George Grosz, who's powerful lithographs are depressingly reminiscent of Gustave Dore.

Home From the Pyramids

BACK FROM CAIRO'S palms and pyramids are the Jeff Pattersons. He's our Minister in Egypt, she's the former Marvin Breckinridge, sister of Bob, one of the State Department's painfully few handsome bachelors. The Pattersons' sister and brother-in-law, Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Howard Davidson, are giving a largish soiree for them Monday night.

The Davidsons live on Cremona Farm and are more or less the patron saints of Maryland's St. Mary's County. The general worked so hard planning the horseshow and county fair, which took place last week, that his ulcers got the better of him! A few days before the great event he was hospitalized.

Mrs. Davidson, who's comfortably backed by the Patterson cash register fortune, is the power behind all sorts of movements. One of her favorites is "Planned Parenthood—and she's had many a lively skirmish with the local clergy.

New Attache Was War Prisoner

DUE TO ARRIVE within a few weeks is the new British air attache, Herbert Roberts. He's a brother-in-law of Russian-born Mrs. Henry Villard, whose husband is a member of the State Department's new and omniscient Planning Board.

Herbert Roberts has had an exciting career. Sent to Singapore to destroy secret radar installations, he waited too long, was captured by the Japanese, kept in a Javanese prison camp for three years. Acquiring seeds, he planted a successful vegetable garden, helped his camp mates stave off starvation.

On the side he managed to set up a secret radio station, kept in constant touch with British and United States forces. When several Allied planes were shot down in the camp's vicinity he salvaged useable parts, pieced them together nights, took them apart daytimes when the Japs inspected camp. The plane was almost ready to take off a month or so before VJ-Day.

Mrs. Roberts is one of the six Gringutes sisters. She was studying advanced nursing at Neuilly Hospital outside Paris when her husband-to-be was brought in with a broken leg. Unexcitingly, he'd merely fallen off a horse in the Bois!

Lieut. Donald Wayne Sencenbaugh, USN, and his bride enjoy the sea breezes at Cambridge Beaches during their honeymoon at Somerset, Bermuda. Mrs. Sencenbaugh is the former Miss Jane Grigsby, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph D. Grigsby of Landover, Md. Married September 20 in College Park, the couple will reside in Belmont, Mass.

They're Off Again!

Racing Enthusiasts Gather At Laurel as New Season Opens

By Marie McNair

"THEY'RE OFF" was the cry raised at Laurel yesterday as the races at the Maryland track opened for the first day of the fall meet.

The clubhouse, newly painted, glistened in pristine white; rose and purple petunias bordered the boxes, and the evergreens rimming th oval track warmed to the rays of the autumnal sun.

The afternoon got off to a happy start at the buffet luncheon given by Henry A. Parr, 3d, president of the Laurel race course, and Mrs. Parr; S. Bryce Wing, vice president of Laurel, and John O. Needles, secretary-treasurer of the organization, and Mrs. Needles, and directors, Breckenridge Long, Rigan McKinney and Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who was counted among the absent, but will be down next week.

Guests gathered on the mezzanine of the clubhouse first, to sip "Stevens" finest old-fashioneds, then to sit down to delicious creamed chicken, shrimp salad, Virginia ham served with steaming cups of coffee.

On the sofa, Miss Pamela Secor, hatless and wearing gray tweeds, sat with Mr. Parr. The niece of Cornelius Vanderbilt Whitney, whose own stables are tops in American racing, Miss Secor was later to see The Doge, from her Pentagon Stables lose in the Capital Handicap.

Vanghn Flannery, perhaps best known as a painter, came with Mrs. Flannery from their home at nearby Harford County, Md., where he publishes the Belair Times and also raises horses. Stuart Janney, famous gentleman steeplechase jockey, was there too, in a group including W. W. Lanahan, and Janon Fisher, and all talking "horses."

Getting in just before post time were Senator Howard McGrath, newly named chairman of the Democratic National Committee, and Philip Perlman, new Solicitor General of the United States. And this girls is NEWS—he's a bachelor!

There wasn't one "also ran" sartorially speaking, among the women who filled the clubhouse boxes. Good looking tweeds and woolen suits were by far the most popular costumes for the day and glancing around at the new skirt lengths I discovered there wasn't one below mid-calf.

Mrs. W. W. Lanahan, just back from a visit to the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, was smartly turned out in a fitted suit of hunter's green with gold lapel ornament and a tiny off-the-face hat. Mrs. Henry Parr's dark blue suit was topped by a pointed hat of the same color and Mrs. John O. Needles was in a gray tweed suit with matching hat with turned back brim.

Blonde Miss Sylvia Szechenyi, daughter of Countess Szechenyi and the late Hungarian Minister to the United States, was squired by Jan Ciechanowski, son of the former Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowski. And in the box with former Assistant Secretary of State Breckenridge Long, were his son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Willcox, and Avra Warren, on leave from his post as American Minister to New Zealand.

LIONEL M. SUMMERS, legal adviser for the State Department who will leave soon for Rome, Italy, was honored yesterday by members of his office with a cocktail party in the Chantilly Room of Hotel Hamilton.

Seronde-Archbold Troth Told

AN ENGAGEMENT of interest to Washington is that of Miss Anne Lucie Seronde to John D. Archbold, son of Mrs. Anne Archbold of Washington. Miss Seronde is the daughter of Prof. Joseph Seronde of Yale University, and the late Mrs. Seronde.

The bride-elect studied at Prospect Hill School of New Haven and was graduated from Westover. She also attended Bennington College and the School of Fine Arts at Yale. She is the granddaughter of the late Felix Schelling, well-known scholar of Shakespeare, and niece of the late Ernest Schelling composer and founder of the children's concerts of the Philharmonic Society of New York.

Mr. Archbold attended Choate School and Princeton University, where he was a member of the Colonial Club. During the war he served overseas as a lieutenant in the Navy. He is the grandson of the late John D. Archbold, one of the founders of the Standard Oil Co., and nephew of Mrs. M. M. van Buren of Newport, R. I. He is the brother of Mrs. Robert Foote of Newport, Mrs. Nicol Smith and Armal Archbold of Upperville, Va.

Mary Haworth's Mail

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Nine years ago, at 23, I married a man 27 whom I had known all my life. Our education, social status, religion and family backgrounds were exactly alike. We had no financial worries and above all we were in love. It seemed an ideal marriage in every respect.

Our only difference, which at the time seemed trivial, was that Dick was an excellent chess player, whereas I had no head for the game. After repeated feeble efforts, I gave up trying to learn, justifying my lethargy on the ground that we still had many other interests in common.

My husband continued to play, as often as two or three nights a week with friends, and exactly one year ago he "adopted" a lady chess player as his chief opponent. She is an expert player, also intelligent and extremely attractive, and he promptly fell in love with her. This was a terrific jolt to me.

Though we have three children and she, too, is married and has children, he asked me for a divorce and the custody of our children as well! Eventually he persuaded me that our children would be better off with a father and stepmother than with me alone and after seven months I agreed to divorce him on his terms.

Monkey Wrench
In the Affair

IN THE MEANTIME, it had become increasingly clear that his feeling for the lady had completely changed our relationship. I learned that while he was very fond of me, he had never loved me as he loves her.

However, I saw no point in starting my divorce until after she had started hers; and then it developed that her husband refuses to step aside. He threatens to deprive her of their children's custody if she seeks divorce. Apparently she can't bring herself to leave her children—which I can well understand,—but she won't renounce my husband either.

She continues to encourage him, but when he tries to pin her down to marriage she is as elusive as a butterfly. Now, while we wait for her to make up her mind, my life is one of slow torture—living with a man whom I love very much, yet am powerless to help or make happy.

Must I, for the children's sake, go on this way? Or should I make a clean sharp break and leave my husband with neither his children, whom he adores, nor the new love he wants? Is it right for the children to live in a home where there is only half the love that used to be? Please help me to decide what is right for us. A. C.

Man and Wife
Both Are Daft

DEAR A. C.: In my opinion, both you and your husband are daft. He is a super-colossal infant and you are a simpleton. It is almost inconceivable that you would have okayed his brass-nerve request for divorce AND the children's custody.

For advice: Don't involve yourself in any way, shape or form with his contemptible exertions to break up his home, take another woman from her husband and separate two flocks of children from their respective mothers. What a heel!

Don't dignify his jackass display of moody frustration with manifestations of heartwrung concern. Don't be ridiculous. Two fools in the family is just too many.

Best Reaction
Is Horse Laugh

IF HE wants a divorce and you'd rather not, don't budge. Let him get it as best he can or do without. Why should you make a burnt offering of yourself to this 36-year-old brat? Take a bystander attitude toward his goings-on.

Stand pat in possession of the home; also as to property rights in general, and as to full custody of the children in case he insists upon—and can contrive—a change of wife. Make up your mind that you don't give a darn whether he loves you or what kind of deal the other woman gives him.

While she's giving him the runaround, you ought to give him the horse-laugh. It might work like a bucket of ice water in sobering him up, if he's got any sense whatever. Also I think it would be a debonair gesture to candidly congratulate the other husband on his "stout fella" behavior and tell him you've taken a page from his notebook.

What can a mother do with a son who is trying to "hijack" the family car? Mary Haworth has a suggestion in her column tomorrow.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Prospect

A prospect is an offer or . . . Suggestion of a deal . . . That sometimes seems so wonderful . . . The deal is almost real . . . And yet so much can happen and . . . So many things go wrong . . . That it is just a vision or . . . A momentary song . . . It figures out a future bright . . . With money in the bank . . . Or promises the pleasure of . . . A more important rank . . . But when the hidden hand is called . . . And when the cards are played . . . It seems that all too often there . . . Is cause to be dismayed . . . And so however wonderful . . . Or what may be supposed . . . A prospect is intangible . . . Until the deal is closed.

Fall's New Silhouette Calls For Exercises to Trim Midriff

By Ida Jean Kain

THAT space betwixt waist and wishbone, fashionably termed the midriff, has taken a trimming. In fact, it's a vital space in this season's silhouette, so you might as well face it—either you've got a slim midriff, or you've got to slim your midriff! It's basic to the new look.

The technique in exercising to make this part of the figure slim and supple . . , and if necessary doff some duffle . . . is to center the up-pull smack at the midsection, apply the right twist and the follow through with the bend at the exact angle. The following exercises will do the trick provided they are done accurately.

Movement: Push the right arm back behind your right ear, and at the same time step back with the right leg . . . now p-u-l-l. Hold for a second and return to starting position. Then push the left arm back behind left ear, and step back with left leg and pull along the side. Repeat three or four times, then relax. That's an easy exercise and almost anyone can take it. The following twist, however, should not be attempted by anyone who has anything wrong with her lower back.

MOVEMENT: Holding arms up, twist slightly at the waist . . . not quite a quarter of the way around . . . and holding that twist, bend to the side-back. Come back to front and center. Holding the arms overhead, twist slightly in the opposite direction, and bend side-back. The exercise will pull out that annoying girdle top roll. Repeat three times on each side, making it an easy, smooth movement. Avoid jerkiness.

Now a side-bend . . .

Movement: Raise the free arm straight up, pull along that side and, bending slowly sideward, try to touch the fingers against the wall. Keep pulling up with the lower abdominal muscles, and do not let hips bow out at sides . . . let all the pull be through the middle. If you can't quite make it, have the hand against the wall flat. Change sides and bend along that side. Repeat not more than twice, but gradually increase up to six counts, alternating sides.

Suited to a Man's Taste

EVERY so often at New York's Stork Club members of a male jury have great fun selecting the type of clothes they think women should wear. Well, Washington as yet has no such "Male Tested Fashions" plan, but it is a fact that more and more men are turning up as spectators at local fashion shows.

Just what is bringing the boys out is not yet clear. Perhaps it is a scientific interest, a means of obtaining first-hand data on what is back of those bills the little woman is unmercifully flinging at him this fall. Or maybe they're so tired of feminine chatter about the new clothes that they've decided to see for themselves. Who knows, a fellow might pick up enough information this way to enable him to get a word in edgewise at at the family dinner table.

But in the majority of cases, we suspect, the man in question attends fashion shows quite by accident. He stumbles on them unsuspectingly while following his normal pursuit of a good lunch or cocktail. For there is hardly a first-rate luncheon spot or cocktail lounge in town that is not offering fashions with the dessert course.

Such was probably the case when Maj. Ralph Forster, formerly of the British army, dropped in at the United Nations Club for luncheon. Before the first course had cooled he was distracted by the spectacle of a full-fledged fashion show. Above, he forsakes his chicken patty, to observe what goes on behind his back. What he sees (besides the pretty model, of course) is a three-piece brown and beige tweed suit, well tailored and beautifully cut. Veddy British, eh? Anyhow, it captured the major's O. K.

Princess Is Radiantly Happy As Wedding Day Approaches

By Inez Robb

New York, Oct. 1 (INS).—England's Princess Elizabeth, in the age-old tradition of brides-to-be the world over, is "radiantly happy" as her wedding day approaches.

The Princess's French companion and governess, Viscountess Marie Antoinette de Bellaigue, shyly admitted as much when she arrived in New York today aboard the SS Queen Elizabeth.

But the chic, attractive viscountess would say no more about her royal charges, the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, beyond the fact that both are "sweet, natural girls."

The viscountess, who has been a member of the royal household since 1941, was genuinely distressed at being discovered by a reporter. In her modest accommodations in the luxury liner's cabin class, she said:

"Please, I must travel incognito. There is nothing I can say. All members of the royal household are under oath never to discuss any members or details of the household."

The viscountess said she had come to America for one month to join her husband, Viscount de Bellaigue. He is a member of the General Secretariat of the United Nations.

Viscountess Bellaigue is returning to England at the end of October to attend the royal wedding. She would not discuss it except to say:

"Lieut. Mountbatten is very handsome. I feel it is like the fairy story, and that, as in the fairy story, they will live happily ever after."

If the princess' French companion was silent concerning her pupils, she was more vocal concerning food conditions in England.

The viscountess, who visited both Belgium and France during the summer, said food conditions in England were worse than in either of the continental countries. She added:

"I do not believe the rations in England today provide an adequate diet for growing children. Adults can manage somehow, but growing children need nourishing food."

Elizabeth Chooses Trousseau Colors

Ridgewood, N. J., Oct. 1 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth has chosen shades of green and blue for her trousseau when she weds Lieut. Philip Mountbatten November 20, a representative of the British Color Council said today.

Hairdressers Name National Officers

Others elected were: Vice presidents—Eric Laetsch, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Jeanette Johnson, Boston, Mass.; Charles Merlet, Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Monica Burmeister, Jackson, Mich., and Mrs. Ann Fisher, Cleveland, Ohio.

Secretary, Mrs. Viola Christensen, Kenosha, Wis.; financial secretary, Mrs. La Fon Vanek, St. Louis, Mo.; treasurer, Max Kuck, Rockville Center, N. Y., and historian, Fay Brown, Lawrence, Kans.

New Perfumizer Resembles Lipstick

Your Questions On Homemaking

1. Is there anything you can put in a drawer of silverware to keep it from tarnishing?

2. I have a little donkey from Mexico whose back is covered with wax fruit. The fruit is coming off. What can I use to put it back on?

3. We have a turtle shell hanging on the wall in our basement, where it is very damp. The shell is scaling off and I've tried to repair it with all kinds of cement and liquid solder, but nothing seems to hold. What do you suggest. L. R.

1. Block camphor helps to keep the atmosphere inside the silverware drawer dry and is therefore helpful in preventing tarnish. There are also, of course, flannel cases in which silver can be wrapped to retard tarnish.

2. Try using candle wax to repair the Mexican ornament. Let wax drip on the donkey's back, place fruit on it while wax is still hot, and hold there until it cools.

3. In view of your experience with the cement and solder, I doubt there's anything you can use that will hold the turtle shell together in the damp basement. How about transferring the ornament to some dryer part of the house?

How can I remove a large spot of baby oil from a light hardwood floor? There wasn't much wax on the floor where it was spilled. I washed it with warm soapsuds and sponged it with alcohol with a little success. C. D.

Use carbon tetrachloride and a brush on the oil spot. Then wipe up with an absorbent cloth. Be sure to have windows in the room open while using the carbon tetrachloride, as its fumes can be injurious.

Mary Haworth's Mail

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Nine years ago, at 23, I married a man 27 whom I had known all my life. Our education, social status, religion and family backgrounds were exactly alike. We had no financial worries and above all we were in love. It seemed an ideal marriage in every respect.

Our only difference, which at the time seemed trivial, was that Dick was an excellent chess player, whereas I had no head for the game. After repeated feeble efforts, I gave up trying to learn, justifying my lethargy on the ground that we still had many other interests in common.

My husband continued to play, as often as two or three nights a week with friends, and exactly one year ago he "adopted" a lady chess player as his chief opponent. She is an expert player, also intelligent and extremely attractive, and he promptly fell in love with her. This was a terrific jolt to me.

Though we have three children and she, too, is married and has children, he asked me for a divorce and the custody of our children as well! Eventually he persuaded me that our children would be better off with a father and stepmother than with me alone and after seven months I agreed to divorce him on his terms.

Monkey Wrench
In the Affair

IN THE MEANTIME, it had become increasingly clear that his feeling for the lady had completely changed our relationship. I learned that while he was very fond of me, he had never loved me as he loves her.

However, I saw no point in starting my divorce until after she had started hers; and then it developed that her husband refuses to step aside. He threatens to deprive her of their children's custody if she seeks divorce. Apparently she can't bring herself to leave her children—which I can well understand,—but she won't renounce my husband either.

She continues to encourage him, but when he tries to pin her down to marriage she is as elusive as a butterfly. Now, while we wait for her to make up her mind, my life is one of slow torture—living with a man whom I love very much, yet am powerless to help or make happy.

Must I, for the children's sake, go on this way? Or should I make a clean sharp break and leave my husband with neither his children, whom he adores, nor the new love he wants? Is it right for the children to live in a home where there is only half the love that used to be? Please help me to decide what is right for us. A. C.

Man and Wife
Both Are Daft

DEAR A. C.: In my opinion, both you and your husband are daft. He is a super-colossal infant and you are a simpleton. It is almost inconceivable that you would have okayed his brass-nerve request for divorce AND the children's custody.

For advice: Don't involve yourself in any way, shape or form with his contemptible exertions to break up his home, take another woman from her husband and separate two flocks of children from their respective mothers. What a heel!

Don't dignify his jackass display of moody frustration with manifestations of heartwrung concern. Don't be ridiculous. Two fools in the family is just too many.

Best Reaction
Is Horse Laugh

IF HE wants a divorce and you'd rather not, don't budge. Let him get it as best he can or do without. Why should you make a burnt offering of yourself to this 36-year-old brat? Take a bystander attitude toward his goings-on.

Stand pat in possession of the home; also as to property rights in general, and as to full custody of the children in case he insists upon—and can contrive—a change of wife. Make up your mind that you don't give a darn whether he loves you or what kind of deal the other woman gives him.

While she's giving him the runaround, you ought to give him the horse-laugh. It might work like a bucket of ice water in sobering him up, if he's got any sense whatever. Also I think it would be a debonair gesture to candidly congratulate the other husband on his "stout fella" behavior and tell him you've taken a page from his notebook.

What can a mother do with a son who is trying to "hijack" the family car? Mary Haworth has a suggestion in her column tomorrow.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

1. Block camphor helps to keep the atmosphere inside the silverware drawer dry and is therefore helpful in preventing tarnish. There are also, of course, flannel cases in which silver can be wrapped to retard tarnish.

2. Try using candle wax to repair the Mexican ornament. Let wax drip on the donkey's back, place fruit on it while wax is still hot, and hold there until it cools.

3. In view of your experience with the cement and solder, I doubt there's anything you can use that will hold the turtle shell together in the damp basement. How about transferring the ornament to some dryer part of the house?

How can I remove a large spot of baby oil from a light hardwood floor? There wasn't much wax on the floor where it was spilled. I washed it with warm soapsuds and sponged it with alcohol with a little success. C. D.

Use carbon tetrachloride and a brush on the oil spot. Then wipe up with an absorbent cloth. Be sure to have windows in the room open while using the carbon tetrachloride, as its fumes can be injurious.

Mary Haworth's Mail

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Nine years ago, at 23, I married a man 27 whom I had known all my life. Our education, social status, religion and family backgrounds were exactly alike. We had no financial worries and above all we were in love. It seemed an ideal marriage in every respect.

Our only difference, which at the time seemed trivial, was that Dick was an excellent chess player, whereas I had no head for the game. After repeated feeble efforts, I gave up trying to learn, justifying my lethargy on the ground that we still had many other interests in common.

My husband continued to play, as often as two or three nights a week with friends, and exactly one year ago he "adopted" a lady chess player as his chief opponent. She is an expert player, also intelligent and extremely attractive, and he promptly fell in love with her. This was a terrific jolt to me.

Though we have three children and she, too, is married and has children, he asked me for a divorce and the custody of our children as well! Eventually he persuaded me that our children would be better off with a father and stepmother than with me alone and after seven months I agreed to divorce him on his terms.

Monkey Wrench
In the Affair

IN THE MEANTIME, it had become increasingly clear that his feeling for the lady had completely changed our relationship. I learned that while he was very fond of me, he had never loved me as he loves her.

However, I saw no point in starting my divorce until after she had started hers; and then it developed that her husband refuses to step aside. He threatens to deprive her of their children's custody if she seeks divorce. Apparently she can't bring herself to leave her children—which I can well understand,—but she won't renounce my husband either.

She continues to encourage him, but when he tries to pin her down to marriage she is as elusive as a butterfly. Now, while we wait for her to make up her mind, my life is one of slow torture—living with a man whom I love very much, yet am powerless to help or make happy.

Must I, for the children's sake, go on this way? Or should I make a clean sharp break and leave my husband with neither his children, whom he adores, nor the new love he wants? Is it right for the children to live in a home where there is only half the love that used to be? Please help me to decide what is right for us. A. C.

Man and Wife
Both Are Daft

DEAR A. C.: In my opinion, both you and your husband are daft. He is a super-colossal infant and you are a simpleton. It is almost inconceivable that you would have okayed his brass-nerve request for divorce AND the children's custody.

For advice: Don't involve yourself in any way, shape or form with his contemptible exertions to break up his home, take another woman from her husband and separate two flocks of children from their respective mothers. What a heel!

Don't dignify his jackass display of moody frustration with manifestations of heartwrung concern. Don't be ridiculous. Two fools in the family is just too many.

Best Reaction
Is Horse Laugh

IF HE wants a divorce and you'd rather not, don't budge. Let him get it as best he can or do without. Why should you make a burnt offering of yourself to this 36-year-old brat? Take a bystander attitude toward his goings-on.

Stand pat in possession of the home; also as to property rights in general, and as to full custody of the children in case he insists upon—and can contrive—a change of wife. Make up your mind that you don't give a darn whether he loves you or what kind of deal the other woman gives him.

While she's giving him the runaround, you ought to give him the horse-laugh. It might work like a bucket of ice water in sobering him up, if he's got any sense whatever. Also I think it would be a debonair gesture to candidly congratulate the other husband on his "stout fella" behavior and tell him you've taken a page from his notebook.

What can a mother do with a son who is trying to "hijack" the family car? Mary Haworth has a suggestion in her column tomorrow.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Washington Post.

Follow the 10-Day Slimming Schedule

Fall's New Silhouette Calls For Exercises to Trim Midriff

By Ida Jean Kain

THAT space betwixt waist and wishbone, fashionably termed the midriff, has taken a trimming. In fact, it's a vital space in this season's silhouette, so you might as well face it—either you've got a slim midriff, or you've got to slim your midriff! It's basic to the new look.

The technique in exercising to make this part of the figure slim and supple . . . and if necessary doff some duffie . . . is to center the up-pull smack at the midsection, apply the right twist and the follow through with the bend at the exact angle. The following exercises will do the trick provided they are done accurately.

First, the pull . . .

Position: Standing, feet slightly apart, arms up overhead.

Movement: Push the right arm back behind your right ear, and at the same time step back with the right leg . . . now p-u-l-l. Hold for a second and return to starting position. Then push the left arm back behind left ear, and step back with left leg and pull along the side. Repeat three or four times, then relax. That's an easy exercise and almost anyone can take it. The following twist, however, should not be attempted by anyone who has anything wrong with her lower back.

MOVEMENT: Holding arms up, twist slightly at the waist . . . not quite a quarter of the way around . . . and holding that twist, bend to the side-back. Come back to front and center. Holding the arms overhead, twist slightly in the opposite direction, and bend side-back. The exercise will pull out that annoying girdle top roll. Repeat three times on each side, making it an easy, smooth movement. Avoid jerkiness.

Now a side-bend . . .

Position: Stand sideways to a wall, arms length away from the wall, finger tips touching the wall. Pull up the lower abdominal muscles.

Movement: Raise the free arm straight up, pull along that side and, bending slowly sideward, try to touch the fingers against the wall. Keep pulling up with the lower abdominal muscles, and do not let hips bow out at sides . . . let all the pull be through the middle. If you can't quite make it, have the hand against the wall flat. Change sides and bend along that side. Repeat not more than twice, but gradually increase up to six counts, alternating sides.

Suited to a Man's Taste

EVERY so often at New York's Stork Club members of a male jury have great fun selecting the type of clothes they think women should wear. Well, Washington as yet has no such "Male Tested Fashions" plan, but it is a fact that more and more men are turning up as spectators at local fashion shows.

Just what is bringing the boys out is not yet clear. Perhaps it is a scientific interest, a means of obtaining first-hand data on what is back of those bills the little woman is unmercifully flinging at him this fall. Or maybe they're so tired of feminine chatter about the new clothes that they've decided to see for themselves. Who knows, a fellow might pick up enough information this way to enable him to get a word in edgewise at at the family dinner table.

But in the majority of cases, we suspect, the man in question attends fashion shows quite by accident. He stumbles on them unsuspectingly while following his normal pursuit of a good lunch or cocktail. For there is hardly a first-rate luncheon spot or cocktail lounge in town that is not offering fashions with the dessert course.

Such was probably the case when Maj. Ralph Forster, formerly of the British army, dropped in at the United Nations Club for luncheon. Before the first course had cooled he was distracted by the spectacle of a full-fledged fashion show. Above, he forsakes his chicken patty, to observe what goes on behind his back. What he sees (besides the pretty model, of course) is a three-piece brown and beige tweed suit, well tailored and beautifully cut. Veddy British, eh? Anyhow, it captured the major's O. K.

Princess Is Radiantly Happy As Wedding Day Approaches

By Inez Robb

New York, Oct. 1 (INS).—England's Princess Elizabeth, in the age-old tradition of brides-to-be the world over, is "radiantly happy" as her wedding day approaches.

The Princess's French companion and governess, Viscountess Marie Antoinette de Bellaigue, shyly admitted as much when she arrived in New York today aboard the SS Queen Elizabeth.

But, the chic, attractive viscountess would say no more about her royal charges, the Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, beyond the fact that both are "sweet, natural girls."

The viscountess, who has been a member of the royal household since 1941, was genuinely distressed at being discovered by a reporter. In her modest accommodations in the luxury liner's cabin class, she said:

"Please, I must travel incognito. There is nothing I can say. All members of the royal household are under oath never to discuss any members or details of the household."

The viscountess said she had come to America for one month to join her husband, Viscount de Bellaigue. He is a member of the General Secretariat of the United Nations.

Viscountess Bellaigue is returning to England at the end of October to attend the royal wedding. She would not discuss it except to say:

"Lieut. Mountbatten is very handsome. I feel it is like the fairy story, and that, as in the fairy story, they will live happily ever after."

If the princess' French companion was silent concerning her pupils, she was more vocal concerning food conditions in England.

The viscountess, who visited both Belgium and France during the summer, said food conditions in England were worse than in either of the continental countries. She added:

"I do not believe the rations in England today provide an adequate diet for growing children. Adults can manage somehow, but growing children need nourishing food."

Elizabeth Chooses Trousseau Colors

Ridgewood, N. J., Oct. 1 (AP).—Princess Elizabeth has chosen shades of green and blue for her trousseau when she weds Lieut. Philip Mountbatten November 20, a representative of the British Color Council said today.

President Joseph P. Gaugler of Color Helm, Inc., United States agency for the British Council, described the colors as "lime flower," a cool green ranging toward chartreuse, "linden," a darker green, "academy blue," a pale grayish blue emy blue," a pale greyish blue, and "spithead blue," a dark blue.

Hairdressers Name National Officers

Others elected were: Vice presidents—Eric Laetsch, New Rochelle, N. Y.; Jeanette Johnson, Boston, Mass.; Charles Merlet, Hartford, Conn.; Mrs. Monica Burmeister, Jackson, Mich., and Mrs. Ann Fisher, Cleveland, Ohio.

Secretary, Mrs. Viola Christensen, Kenosha, Wis.; financial secretary, Mrs. La Fon Vanek, St. Louis, Mo.; treasurer, Max Kuck, Rockville Center, N. Y., and historian, Fay Brown, Lawrence, Kans.

New Perfumizer Resembles Lipstick

Women who like to be "just a little different" will like the dainty, lip-stick-shaped perfumizer soon to be shown at local cosmetic counters. Fill it with a few drops of your favorite perfume, tuck into your purse beside lipstick and compact, and when the evening hours grow long, you can do a complete re-make-up job. To operate the user presses downward on a tiny hinge and out comes a whif of perfume. Finished in gold it is an amusing addition to your "breakfast to dinner" make-up kit.

On the Capital Club Front

Women Form Inter-American Group

The women of the Latin American republics are acutely aware of the food shortage and suffering in Europe and want to help . . . they are alert to the problems confronting the United Nations and are determined to do all they can to strengthen the organization by making its work known . . . they earnestly desire peace and democracy in their own countries . . .

These points were stressed at the Zonta Club's weekly luncheon at the Dodge Hotel yesterday by Miss Heloise Brainerd, who returned recently from Guatemala City, where she was a delegate to the Inter-American Congress of Women. Zonta International was one of the groups sponsoring the conference in Guatemala, which was initiated by the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom. Miss Brainerd, chairman of the league's Inter-American committee, also is general secretary of the organizing committee of the congress.

"One of the principal outcomes of the congress," she declared, "was the formation of the Inter-American Federation of Women. Composed of associations rather than individuals, the federation will attempt to carry out resolutions passed at the congress. Headquarters are in Washington and the secretariat includes Mrs. Annalee Stewart, Mrs. Carmen de Lozada of Bolivia and Miss Brainerd.

"Perhaps the most important fact noticed at the congress," said Miss Brainer, "was that these women coming together—many of them living in exile—were so largely in accord in their earnest desire for peace and democracy in their countries and the means of obtaining these objectives."

Many of the resolutions passed, she reported, were based on the U. N. Charter. Some also emphasized the need for improving living conditions in some of the South and Central American countries, more civil rights for women, special care for children—educational and social, and rehabilitation of criminals.

Need Better Living

"The women feel that internal development to raise the standard of living is the only effective means to combat communism and prevent another war," the speaker pointed out. "They feel strongly against standardization of military equipment in the Americas. They have seen the effect of United States arms in their own countries . . in bolstering dictatorships and keeping down all popular movements for democratic government. They insist that all money available should be used to purchase such really needed things as agricultural equipment, industrial machinery and sanitation materials."

Mrs. Dorothy Scates, president of the Washington Zonta Club, presided at the luncheon and Mrs. Dorothy Girton introduced the speaker.

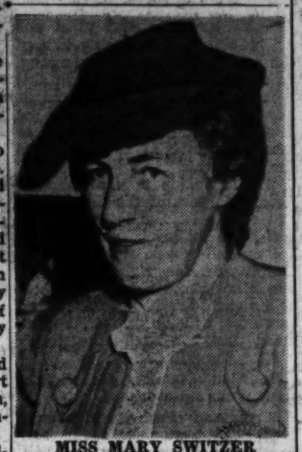
Radcliffe Alumnae Meets

Research Needs Federal Aid, Miss Switzer Tells Club Group

Deploring the shortage of scientific personnel in all fields, Miss Mary E. Switzer, special assistant to the Federal Security Administrator, yesterday told members of the Radcliffe Club of Washington that the Government should place major emphasis on stimulating and supporting research.

Miss Switzer, a Radcliffe graduate herself, was speaker at the club's first luncheon-meeting of the season held at the Good Earth Restaurant.



MISS MARY SWITZER
. . . For scientific research

Subject of her talk was the work of President Truman's scientific research board on which she represented the Federal Security Agency.

"Scientific research is vital to national progress," she declared. "The board has recommended that by 1957 we should be spending 1 per cent of our total national income on research and development . . . The war cut down production of scientists in medical and related fields by two thirds, making planning of personnel distribution very important."

The board has also recommended the extent of Government support to laboratories other than its own, such as universities and other institutions, she reported.

The first undergraduate at Radcliffe to specialize in international law, Miss Switzer was awarded the President's Certificate of Merit in recognition of two war jobs. She was assistant to the head of the War Research Service and also helped the chairman of the Procurement and Assignment Service in mobilizing and rationing doctors, dentists and nurses.

Mrs. William A. Coblenz, president of the Radcliffe Club of Washington, presided at yesterday's gathering.

Joy of Sharing Can Be Taught Young Child

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

CHILDREN are selfish before they are unselfish. We help to make them so by implanting the feeling of possessiveness in the young baby. We say emphatically, "This is baby's—and this is mother's!"

That is all to the good. It helps the child to differentiate between what is his to do with as he pleases, and what belongs to someone else and must be asked for.

But it leads to selfishness because the keener his sense of his own property the more reluctant he may be to share it with others. We have to begin, then, to show him that there is a satisfaction in both owning and sharing.

Some children seem naturally to be unselfish, but their unselfishness has a selfish purpose. These are quite often "only" children and lonely children and they would give away all they possessed for the boon of companionship. It works for them, too, for they discover that they have a commodity to trade; these toys which some playmate can use.

The youngest child in a group is apt to be lavish with his possessions in order to get the older ones to notice him. Older ones hold on to everything they have, because there is no profit for them in giving them up.

There is nothing to be gained by calling the child selfish in the hopes that the parent's shame or ridicule will help him to be unselfish. Children get used to being called selfish or mean or disobedient, or what have you, and soon cease to react to the bark.

Instead, try to sell the child on the benefits of sharing. He can still own whatever he has. It is his to keep, but by sharing he enhances its value. He shares the joy the other child gets from use of it, and he knows himself to be the author of that joy. That is more fun than merely holding onto a toy for his own use, or to prevent its use by others.

Also, when he shares with others they in turn share with him and so he has not only his own toy but the toys of others. Everyone gains and no one loses in such a transaction.

And, to be realistic, even if sometimes one child is penalized by the selfishness of others, or his toys get a destructive workout, how much more important it is for him as a person to have had happy association with children and made friends than to have preserved a toy for his own personal, solitary use.

MINDING YOUR BUSINESS

Neither Shylock Nor Santa

THE FOUR-YEAR, 20-billion-dollar shopping list sent over here by the 16 Marshall-Plan nations won't overtax the United States economy. The biggest impact, six billions, hits next year. But since the country's capacity to produce goods alone runs to 100 billions, the toll will run to only 6 per cent of our energies and assets. On that basis, we could readily say, "Sure, let's go."

Livingston

The United States is in an embarrassing position. We're like the unscratched football player after a knock-down, drag-out game. Everybody's hurt except him. Sheepishly he makes the rounds of the college infirmary and apologizes to his fellow players for his good health. The Marshall Plan is America's apology for its current high standard of living. It's a formal acknowledgment that we must do all we can to get Europe out of the hospital.

Yet, we do not have an unlimited liability. We must be sure that what the 16 nations have submitted is a shopping list rather than a Christmas list. In a shopping list you ask for things you really need. It's an adult undertaking. A Christmas list is a child's irresponsible expression of what he'd like to have because somebody else is paying for it.

AMERICA'S postwar obligations fall into two categories:

1. First aid. Under this come the four F's: Food, fertilizer, fuel and freight cars. We've got to see that food is shipped, that Europe's factories have fuel, that goods move, and that fertilizer is plowed into the soil for next year's crops. Also, we've got to restore plants and mines to prewar production levels. First aid comes under the head of disaster relief. Whether we ought to charge for it, to take I. O. U.'s, is questionable.

2. Long-term development and reconstruction. Here's where the United States cannot afford to play Santa Claus. We must apply a needs test. Take, for example, the Paris Conference report on steel. It calls for raising French steel-making capacity 30 per cent above any previous peak. That's far more than reconstruction. At the same time, Germany's steel potential is cut back 40 per cent. Thus, a new industrial pattern is set for Europe. That raises this question: Is it the purpose of the Marshall Plan to rearrange industrial frontiers?

Moreover, if the French are to have greatly expanded steel capacity, if their entire industry is to be geared into an enlarged steel production, then it certainly ought not to be a gift from rich Uncle Bountiful. It ought to be something that the French feel they require, something they're willing to pay for—in the form of a long-term, low-interest loan. Willingness to pay is evidence of need or at least genuine want.

Not all the 16 nations have equal claims on United States aid. Some neutrals suffered little, if any, destruction during the war: Ireland, Portugal, Sweden and Switzerland. They do not require largesse. They ought to be in a position to make repayments. Indeed, they will be aided indirectly if we help war-torn Europe rebuild. Other countries, though overrun by the Nazis, possess resources and manpower, and ought to pay for at least part of what they seek: Belgium, The Netherlands.

The State Department and Congress must set up an aid standard which will insure that the United States will be neither a Shylock nor a Santa. Such a standard might well be this: Any aid which increases plant capacity or the standard of living beyond prewar ought to be paid for—ultimately.

BY PRESENT-DAY European standards, the United States has goods to burn. Visiting Britishers often are made ill by the amount of food set before them. Yet, our very well-to-do-ness creates a problem all its own. Domestic demand for food is greater than ever. So are demands for electrical equipment, freight cars, farm machinery and a few other things which Europe sorely needs. We don't know quite how to insulate ourselves against Europe's needs. We have the will—the good will—to supply the goods, but lack adequate social machinery.

To Europeans, with Hitler and Stalin dictatorships as background, getting what's needed would seem easy. Simply requisition wheat, or agricultural equipment, or turbines. But requisitioning doesn't work in a free, democratic society. The town that can't expand its electric plant isn't delighted to learn that it's making a sacrifice in behalf of Europe. Nor will the farmer cheer because the tractor he needs is going abroad. To most people, European aid adds to the inflationary pressures over here. It sends up prices, which force up wages, which send up prices again. That's the American dilemma: How to discharge our responsibility to Europe, yet protect ourselves against it. And that's a column all its own.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Oct. 1 (AP).—Purchases of more than five million bushels of cash grain by the Government for export to foreign nations caused a good demand for all cereals on the Board of Trade today. Wheat paced a strong price upturn.

In addition to Government cash wheat buying, the market was influenced by continued dry conditions in the Southwestern wheat area and the belief America will attempt to export 370 million bushels of all grains in this crop year.

The December wheat contract set a new seasonal high at 2.92⅛. That is also the highest price at which any December wheat contracts has sold in the nearly 100-year history of the board.

Wheat closed 5 to 8¼ higher, December, 2.91¼@2.91⅜; corn was 3¼@8¾ higher, December, 2.36⅛@2.38¼; and oats 1¼@2¾ higher, December, 1.15⅞@1.16. Soybeans jumped the 8-cent limit, November, 3.58.

The Commodity Credit Corporation bought 2,505,000 bushels of wheat at Kansas City yesterday, 1,950,000 bushels at Minneapolis and 1,060,300 bushels at Chicago. This total of 5,123,300 bushels was the largest purchase in a single day in many weeks.

President Truman told the citizens' food committee in Washington that 470 million bushels of all grain "are the most we can plan to export under present conditions." However, he added "we will have to export at least 100 million bushels more." A food-saving program will be launched to obtain the additional 100 million bushels.

Road Project Pleas Meet With Rebuff

Richmond, Va., Oct. 1 (AP).—Half a dozen delegations from eastern Virginia appeared before the State Highway Commission today to ask for road improvements, but were met with the reminder from Highway Commissioner James A. Anderson that the highway dollar "isn't what it used to be."

General Anderson told the visitors from four highway districts that while his department's revenues may have gone up 25 per cent over 1941, that "construction costs have gone up 65 to 75 per cent."

The department, he added, is "relatively not in as good a position as it was six years ago."

A three-man delegation from Arlington County, headed by City Manager A. T. Lundberg of Arlington asked that existing appropriations be enlarged for work on a number of county projects. The group asked particularly for more funds for Route 211 because of its large volume of traffic.

A large delegation from Orange County, headed by N. C. Bailey, member of the House of Delegates, asked the commission for funds to build an underpass in the town of Orange where Routes 15 and 20 intersect.

Another delegation from Prince George and Hopewell, headed by State Senator Garland S. Gray of Waverly, asked the extension of improvements on Route 154 from Route 106 to Route 460. Tentative allocation covers improvement only from Hopewell to Route 106.

A 40-man delegation from Mecklenburg, headed by Sam Freeman, president of the Clarksville Chamber of Commerce sought improvement of Route 58 from Route 1 to Boydton. No funds were set aside for Mecklenburg in the tentative list for 1948-49 made public a month ago.

City Manager W. C. Drager of Williamsburg headed a delegation which urged approval of a $50,000 allocation for improvement of primary highways within Williamsburg, remarking that the city was "more than willing" to match State funds on a 50-50 basis.

Warmer Day Due to Follow Nippy Night

Considerable damage to farm and garden crops in the Greater Washington area was reported on the coldest October 1st in 31 years.

In Washington, where the mercury rose to 60 degrees at 4:46 p. m., it was 38 degrees at 6:14 a. m. It was the coldest October 1 since 1916, and only two degrees above the record low for the day set in 1899.

Strictly warmer weather for Washington was forecast by the Weather Bureau last night, with a low of about 40 degrees expected in the city, but light to heavy frosts in the suburbs. Today is expected to be fair with the temperature disingo to about 65 degrees.

In Fairfax County, Va., Tuesday night's cold did more damage to crops than any of the several preceding frosts, L. H. Blair, assistant county farm agent, said. He estimated damage at about $50,000.

Late Gardens Hurt

Nearly all late gardens were ruined, and corn and soybean hay suffered considerable damage, Blair said. He estimated that the grazing season in the dairying sections in the northern part of the county had been cut short about 15 days.

The Montgomery County, Md., loss was estimated at from $50,000 to $75,000 by County Agent O. W. Anderson. Tomatoes, sugar corn, other vegetables and hay suffered chiefly, he said.

In Prince Georges County, Md., late potatoes, string beans, tomatoes and tobacco were severely damaged by the Tuesday night and weekend frosts, County Agent P. E. Clark said.

Little Damage on Charles

iLttle damage in Charles County, Md., was reported by P. D. Brown, county agent, wh osaid that while there were some reports of damage to garden crops in low areas, most of the tobacco was in.

In Anne Arundel County, Md., where Annapolis suffered a low of 39 degrees Tuesday night, loss of more than 100 acres of tobacco was reported by County Agent Stanley E. Day.

Chinese Regard Wallace Melon As U. S. Memorial

Lanchow, Kansu Province, China, Oct. 1.—The greatest monument to America in this part of the world is the Wallace Kua, or Wallace Melon. It is simply the common honeydew melon descended from seeds brought here by Henry A. Wallace, when, as vice president, he visited northwest China in 1944.

It has supplied the local farmers with a new cash crop.

It seems likely that the name Wallace, though in garbled form, may be enshrined here forever. It is pronounced something like "hua-la-suh."

People around here have definite notions about Mr. Hua-la-suh. They say he is a practical man. Presumably, they will still be saying this a thousand years from now, regardless of the judgment of historians elsewhere.

Montgomery P-TA Council to Hear Its Objectives

The executive committee of the Montgomery County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations will present its major objectives to the P-TA council at a meeting at 8:15 p. m. tomorrow at Montgomery Blair High School.

Nathan R. Gilbert council president, yesterday outlined the recommendations. If approved by the 35 delegates, they will be adopted as the organization's immediate objectives for the year.

The objectives to be recommended include bringing teaching salary schedules in line with county policies, making a study of the method of selecting school board members, and increasing school construction to meet anticipated needs.

Looks Like We've Offended Moscow Again

The manager of an F st. drug store approached his two well-dressed customers and asked:

"Something for you, gentlemen?"

"Yes. An essence dispenser, please."

"Essence dispenser? You mean a spray for the nose?"

"No, no. Essence dispenser. How you say it in English . . . for the perfume."

Then, with a withering look at the mystified druggist, they stalked from the store in anger.

The manager's perplexity was in no way lessened by the gales of laughter which issued from a girl who had watched the transaction while waiting her turn.

"What's so funny?" snapped the manager.

"They were speaking Russian," she explained. "They were outraged at the lengths to which Americans will go to remind them about the bomb—such as calling an essence dispenser an atomizer."

STREET SCENE

"Old Man" (Conrad) Reid of 106 East Thornapple st., Chevy Chase, Md., is our reporter for this one:

"The ancient was crossing D st. sw., relying too heavily on the boulevard 'stop' sign on that corner.

"The east-bound car slowed down somewhat, so the ancient ventured into its line of fire.

"But instead of coming to a stop, the car kept right on going, and the old man had to leap backward to escape it.

"Do you suppose the driver was some irresponsible kid, or a stranger in town perhaps? Wrong. He was a Metropolitan Police sergeant."

VOICE FROM THE PAST

She wasn't very old, but it was plain that she'd had tough sledding. Her clothes were worn, but neat. The restaurant manager shook his head.

"Sorry, but I've got a full crew."

"I can do anything. I've worked in restaurants for 15 years."

"I wish I could use you—but we don't have an opening right now."

She turned to go—then hesitated.

"Could I wash dishes for a meal? I'm hungry."

The manager seemed to start, as if he'd heard an unpleasant voice from the past.

"I'm sorry," he said. "I didn't know. You don't have to wash any dishes. Just sit down there and the girl will serve you anything you want."

She ordered the most inexpensive meal on the menu, and when she thought that nobody was looking, I saw her wrap two pieces of bread in a paper napkin, and tuck them in her purse.

When she had finished, she rose and managed to say "thank you" without crying. Then she disappeared into the crowds on the sidewalk.

PHANTOM DRIVER

C. R. F. Smith of 4654 S. 34th st., Arlington, Va., muses:

"Will 'Mr. Emerson' again be driving Judge Ready's car while the judge's driving permit is in 30-day hock?"

Emerson? Emerson? I don't believe we've met the gentleman, Smitty.

VAGRANT THOUGHT

Wonder if those five sailboats are still parked on the stage of Lisner Auditorium? (The George Washington University sailing team didn't have any other place to store them.)

MEMO TO MR. HANNEGAN

"Neither snow nor rain nor heat nor gloom of night stays these couriers (mailmen) from the swift completion of their appointed rounds."

But one small area in Alexandria seems to pose a different kind of problem. Samuel Taylor of 2476 S. Lowell st., Arlington, Va., writes:

"The mailman passes up the 1000 blocks of Pitt, Royal, and Fairfax sts. in Alexandria, but he does deliver mail in the 1100 blocks of these same streets. Do you know why?"

I dunno, Sam. I suppose it's a regulation of some sort. Let's see what the Post Office officials have to say.

And Nothing Can Be Done About It

OH, FLETCHER, I HEARD THE MOST AMUSING STORY AT THE BRIDGE CLUB! I TOLD MAY I WAS GOING TO GO RIGHT HOME AND TELL IT TO YOU
I WAS SO AFRAID I'D FORGET IT BEFORE I GOT HOME, SO I WROTE IT DOWN WORD FOR WORD. YOU'RE GOING TO LOVE THIS
THERE WAS A MAN WHO OWNED THREE CARS, TWO MOTORCYCLES AND AN AIRPLANE- YET HE STILL WALKS IN HIS SLEEP. ISN'T THAT A SCREAM?
HOW'D YOU MAKE OUT AT BRIDGE TODAY?

Savo Hits on Only One, Still Stars

NEW YORK—Despite the recent operation in which he lost his leg, Jimmy Savo's comedy is as perfect as ever. And he's arranged a theatre, night-club and writing schedule which will keep him busy for a long time. Savo never was one for rest or idleness, and only once in his career did he ever agree to take time off. That was when he had been signed for "White Horse Inn" and William Gaxton then was given his role. Savo's agent, Sam Lyons, arranged the settlement—$850 a week for the run of the show, provided he took no other work.

C. Thambo, secretary to the Indonesian delegation to the U.N., was asked this week about conditions in his homeland. "I don't know," he replied. "We've been cut off completely from all contact with Indonesia."

When Max Baer, the former heavyweight champ, was asked if he was considering a comeback he said: "No. I decided against it when I found I was being outpointed by my shadow."

An actress who has made little progress on Broadway told producer George Abbott that she was being married. "Good," said Abbott. "I often think marriage is an institution designed to absorb all the bad actresses."

A British spiritualist invited H. L. Mencken to attend a seance with him. Mencken agreed and then suggested to the medium: "Can you bring back the spirit of Noah?" . . . "Well, Mr. Mencken, now really," said the medium, "it isn't quite likely, is it, that Noah would want to return?" . . . "Why not?" said Mencken. "I think Noah'd like to see the Queen Elizabeth."

Abe Atell, the former fight champ and Broadway tavern keeper, sat with a group of gamblers and philosophized to them: "Here's the only way to look at life. Every night, when I go to sleep, I just close my eyes and say to myself, 'Well, I beat that guy Time out of another day.'"

And at the last meet at Monmouth Park Race Track, the Secretary General Trygve Lie Purse was run. It was a $3000 race for 2-year-olds. Lie didn't learn about it until Wednesday. "If I'd known a race was named after me," he said, "I'd have been there and made a bet."

When an autograph hunter approached Fannie Brice and said: "May I have your autograph, Miss Bruce?" she told him: "Of course. And that's very nuce of you."

The fine imposed by the New York State Boxing Commission against the Twentieth Century Sporting Club Friday and the publicity about the racketeers moving into the boxing field reminded Bill Hardy, proprietor of the Gay Nineties, about his favorite customer, the late Sam H. Harris. He was Broadway's most esteemed show producer. In his early years, he managed the prizefight career of Terrible Terry McGovern. "Did you ever make a bet against McGovern?" Hardy once asked him . . . "No, I never bet against Terry," Harris said. "If I couldn't bet on him, there was no fight."

David Smart, the publisher of Esquire, was invited by Paul Gallico to go fishing in the waters off Gallico's seaside home in Devon.
